

'Private Lives' Stars Have Personal Interest In Show

By RON BONN

There's a good deal of sentiment wrapped up in Players' "Private Lives," especially for the show's two stars.

For Richard Powdrell it means the fulfillment of a long-standing desire to do a play by Noel Coward, a personal idol. Robert D. Reifsneider, the show's director, says, "Dick practically begged to be allowed to try out for this one." Anne Wahl's emotional tie-up with the show is simpler. When "Lives" closes, she will leave Players and the College, to be married.

The two together are an interesting combination. Powdrell has a clipped, almost flippant way about him which probably helped more than anything else in getting him the lead in the sophisticated, brittle show. Miss Wahl, in person, is rather intense, quite warm. Reifsneider believes it is this personal warmth which permits her to play so convincingly the mature rolls she often takes with Players. Last year's theatergoers will remember her as a middle-aged maid in "Kind Lady," and the still-glamorous mother of a grown daughter in "Yes, My Darling Daughter."

Wants To Write

Powdrell, too, worked in "Daughter," switching off with Bryson Craine in the male ingenue role. A Liberal Arts senior, he came to Players by way of Five O'Clock theater. Professionally, he's more interested in the writing end of the theater. Although he wants to write plays and fiction, he may take a master's degree in accounting since, in his words, "You gotta eat."

Describing "Private Lives," he says, "It's a play I've always wanted to do. It's utterly meaningless and completely enjoyable." Miss Wahl goes into less detail, only saying, "I'm crazy about the play."

From Town and Nine

Asked for any distinguishing characteristics, Miss Wahl says, "I'm left-handed, I was a life-guard for two summers, and I've got a little brother who's a frosh—he buttons." This last with gestures.

Miss Wahl, a junior in sociology, is a native of State College and came to Players by way of Town and Nine, a local dramatic group. Reifsneider saw her in "The Night of January Sixteenth" with Town and Nine, and asked her to try out for "Kind Lady."

In contrast, Powdrell is a relative foreigner. A New Yorker, he spent his freshman year at Champlain college in the Empire state. As to why he came to Penn State, he just says, "I had a cousin here who got me in."

Reifsneider is quite happy about both his stars. He predicts a successful six-week run for them in the Coward opus. "High comedy is one of the most difficult things to do," he says, "and these two have the sense of timing and acting ability for it."

Nomination Days Set By Councils

Seven student councils will hold preliminary nominations from Oct. 23 to 27 for positions of freshman and sophomore representatives. Elections will be held Nov. 1-2 from 9 a.m. till 12 noon and 1 to 5 p.m.

Voting places have not been decided yet.

Schools holding council nominations are Chemistry and Physics, Education, Engineering, Home Economics, Liberal Arts, Mineral Industries, and Physical Education.

The inter-council committee plans school council elections in connection with the All-College elections committee. The committee was organized in an attempt to have all student councils work together as a unit. According to David Ludwig, committee president.

President of all student councils make up ICC. They are Carroll Howes, Agriculture; Robert Sharets, Chemistry and Physics; Clarke Young, education; Raymond Miller, Engineering; Huber Stevens, Home Economics; Edward Shanken, Liberal Arts; David Ludwig, Mineral Industries; and Charlotte McIntyre, Physical education.

The committee will coordinate school council elections, finan-
