Anniversary

Yesterday was the first anniversary of the Student Dry Cleaning Agency, one of the lesser known organizations on campus.

THE SDCA started a year ago with the aid of a $50 loan from All-College cabinet. Despite many handicaps and the lack of facilities, it managed to finish the year in the black. The SDCA has its central agency in the PUB and has representatives in every dorm except the West Dorms. Plans are being formulated to open an office there as soon as the dining hall opens.

The organization has a student owned truck, and is student operated. Clothing is collected five times a week, and delivered to the cleaners. The student lists his preference from the eight different cleaners and three laundries represented.

GUY TEMPLE is the manager this year, and with the aid of Allan Reece, supervisor, hopes to increase the service and the profits of the agency. When you think of dry cleaning, think of student dry cleaning and help your fellow students in their new endeavor.

Sloppy Customs

It is evident to anyone who has been observing the freshmen on campus during the past week that they are of the opinion that customs are over. Fewer dinks are seen and the black bow ties are drooping lower and lower on the shirt fronts.

THIS IS very probably encouraged by the also diminishing number of black hats seen around the College. It would appear that the hatmen are tired of "playing cop" with the new men or perhaps they feel that the freshmen already have enough spirit. They have not had the help of the general student body and they no longer wish to carry the ball.

Since a sloppy and half-hearted thing is worse than none, why not make it none? Let's abolish customs now while there is still a memory of what they are supposed to be. —Bud Fenton

Student Voice

Seniors and juniors who like to have a voice in how their class affairs are handled will have a chance to express their views at meetings of the two classes Tuesday night at White hall. Participation in class meetings in the past has been conspicuously low, and students who do not want a few class members to do all their thinking for them would do well to attend these meetings.

SENIORS, especially, should have a vital interest in the business to be discussed—chiefly the proposal to attempt to abolish final examinations for eighth-semester seniors. In the past many students have expressed themselves strongly on this issue, and the meeting offers them a chance to put their ideas into action.

Not that we expect great throngs of seniors and juniors to turn out for the meetings—but it would be a heartening sign after the apathy that has existed in the past.

Bard States Aims Of ICG Program

A fuller acquaintance and working knowledge with government will be the aim of the Inter-collegiate Conference on Government this year, Richard Bard, president of the campus chapter, told members at their first meeting this year.

The meeting was primarily an organizational one to acquaint prospective members with the activities of the organization.

Bard went on to explain the local activities of the organization, such as round table discussions and practice of parliamentary procedure. All these activities, he said, are in preparation for the state-wide convention in Harrisburg next April. ICG chapters from colleges throughout the state will meet then to hold a model United States Congress.

Other old members of the club then explained some of the club's trips and conferences last year. Eighteen people attended the meeting.

The next meeting of the group will be held on Oct. 23 at 7:30 p.m. The place will be announced later.

Hort Department To Present Show

The 37th annual horticultural show, Oct. 28 and 29, will be dedicated to President Milton S. Eisenhower.

Theme of the show will be, "Your Own Back Yard."

Beds of bronze, yellow and white chrysanthemums will carry out the theme, while the home gardener's use of flowers, fruits and vegetables will be accented. The show, sponsored by the horticulture department and club, will be held in the stock pavilion.
