Marriages

Chetway-Broadkin

Mr. Robert Chetway and Miss Alice Broadkin were married at noon Monday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Broadkin, Rev. M. L. Cassoway officiating.

The groom is a popular young bum who hasn't done a lick of work since he got skipped in the middle of his junior year at college. He manages to dress well and keep a supply of spending money because his dad is a soft-hearted old fool who takes up his bad checks instead of letting him go to jail where he belongs.

The bride is a skinny little idiot who has been kissed by every boy in town since she was twelve years old. She paints like a Sioux Indian, sucks cigarettes in secret, and drinks mean corn liquor when she is out joy-riding in her dad's car at night. She doesn't know how to cook, sew, or keep house.

The house was newly plastered for the wedding and the exterior newly painted, thus appropriately carrying out the decorative scheme, for the groom was newly plastered, also, and the bride newly painted.

Rented Suit

The groom wore a rented dinner suit over underwear of imitation silk. His pants were held up by green suspenders. His number eight patent leather shoes matched his state in tightness and harmonized nicely with the axle-grease polish of his hair. In addition to his jag, he carried a pocket knife, a bunch of keys, an unpaid bill for a ring and his usual look of imbecility.

The bride wore some kind of white thing that left most of her legs sticking out at one end and the bone upper end sticking out at the other.

The young people will make their home with the bride's parents—which means they will sponge on the old man until he dies and then she will take in washing.

In writing this uncommonly candid social note, Robert Quillen of the Fountain Inn, South Carolina Tribune, employed fictitious names in order to guard against libel suits and simple assault, and was thereby enabled to realize the ambition of every day-dreaming reporter—to write, just once, an honest account of a local wedding.

Beta Theta Pi

The Betas are having a roller skating party Saturday, October 14, at the Coliseum. On Tuesday, October 17, the house will entertain the Alpha Chi Omegas with a spaghetti supper and other entertainment.

Orchids To John . . .

DOROTHY HORGAN SMILES happily as she pins the winning corsage on her date, John Albarano, at the Dungaree Drag Saturday night.

The corsage made by Dorothy for this girl-ask-boy affair sports a yellow toy banjo, three popcorn balls, three cigarettes, blue and white ribbon, and a small toy airplane with a propeller three inches long. The airplane was attached to a stick 18" long and formed the base of the corsage. A real corsage of yellow, white, and orchid flowers was the prize.

A record crowd attended the Drag, which was sponsored by Cwens, sophomore women's honorary.

New Jewelry On Display

Modern jewelry, designed and made by Doris and Ed Weiner, New York silversmiths, is being exhibited in the first floor cases of the Home Economics building.

The jewelry uses silver, gold, copper, and brass in combination with semi-precious stones, such as lapis lazuli and turquoise. Metals are both polished and dull; stones are usually in the form of nuggets. Various pieces have a 3-dimensional effect and are mobile. The drop earrings swing and the pendants are in constant motion.

The exhibit, which will continue until Tuesday, is open to the public. It has been arranged by the Division of Home Arts under the direction of Mrs. Beth K. Wham, instructor in home art.
