'Ike' Recommended For Western Defense Army

WASHINGTON—General Dwight Eisenhower has been recommended for supreme commander of a combined army to defend western Europe by the military representatives of the North Atlantic treaty nations.

The Atlantic Treaty military leaders called for immediate action in picking a supreme commander for a combined army to defend western Europe.

To Release Guard Units

WASHINGTON—Army Secretary Pace said yesterday that the army hopes to start releasing mobilized National Guard and reservists next Summer. The program may be completed before 1952. Pace said that more American troops may soon go to Europe, but no National Guard units will go overseas. The Air Force announced that it will halt at once the call-up of enlisted reserves.

Stock Prices Fall

NEW YORK—Prices in the stock market at Wall Street plunged yesterday in a wholesale selling from $1 to more than $3 a share. It was the biggest drop since the crack-up which followed the start of the Korean war.

It was also announced at the meeting that the Red Cross had dropped out of the drive due to a conflict with its policy. Because the campus chest will be the sole money-gathering campaign on campus the Red Cross will not receive funds from the College this year.

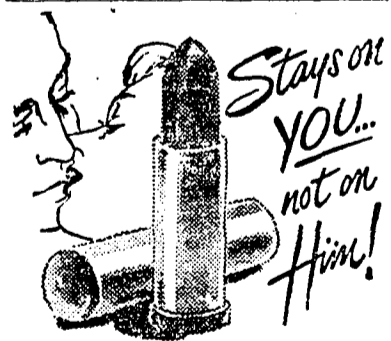

Students will be kept abreast of the progress of the drive by a "thermometer" to be placed outside the main gate. The daily advance of the drive toward its $14,000 goal will be shown.

Approval Given Course Evaluation

A course evaluation survey in the School of Mineral Industries yesterday received delayed approval of Dean Edward M. Steidle.

According to Ray Angstadt, student council member, arguments against the survey rested upon assumptions that the success of a course depends upon the student, that the instructor knows what is best for his course, and that the survey would only result in a waste of time.

The first such survey in the MI School was held two semesters ago. The second survey, taken last semester, aided in bringing about changes in the credit ratings of two ceramics courses.
