

Soliciting Under Way For Campus Chest

The Campus chest drive got into full swing yesterday as solicitors began contacting students on the campus and in town. Reports on the first days activities were unavailable as Collegian went to press. However, students may check the progress of the drive through a large thermometer placed near Carnegie hall.

The goal of the drive is $14,000 and each student is being asked to contribute $2. The Campus chest is a combination of all individual drives held on campus in previous years.

Players Honor Soccer Coach

Bill Jeffrey, soccer coach at the College, was honored by many of his former players and those of the 1950 team on Saturday at the Alumni luncheon in Recreation hall.

The players, represented by Harry Little, captain of the present team, gave the veteran Scotsman a set of silver service in recognition of his fine coaching over a period of 25 years.

Tremendous Hand

Introduced by master of ceremonies Lou Bell, director of public information at the College, the 60-year-old coach received a tremendous hand from the 700 persons gathered for the luncheon. When Little gave him the set, which was inscribed, "from your players from 1925 to 1950," Jeffrey told the crowd that nothing would have been possible without the cooperation of "the boys."

The cooperation of "the boys" was good enough to produce 13 undefeated teams in 24 seasons and develop 35 All-American players during the same length of time.

During the 1930's, Jeffrey coached teams went undefeated for 65 consecutive games over a nine-year period. The present team has not been defeated since 1948.

Alumni

The alumni of Jeffrey teams present included Bill McEwen, All-American of 1934-35-36 who still holds the scoring record for a single season and the four Hosterman brothers, Woody Walt, Ken, and Ralph, all of whom were All-Americans during their undergraduate days.

The tanned, leathery-faced Scot was selected to head the nations team in the World Cup competition in South America last summer and has handled the Olympic teams in other years.

Council Passes Constitution After Debate

By MOYLAN MILLS.

West dorm council passed its proposed constitution after careful scrutiny and heated debate last night.

Lengthy discussion centered on the roles resident dorm advisers are to have in the council set up. An amendment to the constitution was subsequently passed making advisers ex-officio members.

Richard Klingensmith, chairman of the public welfare committee, reported he had talked to Russell Clark, housing director, concerning damage in West dorms. Klingensmith reported Clark as saying he would cooperate fully with the council. The council, in turn, gave Clark a unanimous vote of confidence for his handling of the dorm damage affair and affirmed its intention of cooperating with him in future matters.

A motion for the council to sponsor a contest with three prizes to be given away Nov. 20 was proposed by John Clark, finance committee chairman, and passed by the council.

First prize will be an invitation to the Military Ball, a corsage, and rental of a Tuxedo, or $15. Second prize will be a 15 pound turkey with shipment paid to any place in the country, or $10. Third prize will be $5.

A motion was passed to send a letter to Russell Clark, authorizing him to have the post office provide a truck to carry laundry cases between West dorm post office and the town post office. Blair Green pointed out that similar service is available in the Nittany-Pollock area.

Nab Con Man At Theta Chi

A confidence man with a string of fraternity robberies behind him was apprehended Friday night at the Theta Chi fraternity house.

Edward J. Stack, 30, was recognized by fraternity members while posing as Joe Hubbard, president of the chapter's Colgate university branch. Warnings about him had been issued by the Theta Chi national organization.

Rockview State Police and State College police, who picked up Stack at the local fraternity house, said that he had stolen Hubbard's wallet. He had been in Hubbard in Theta Chi houses in New York, New Hampshire, and Connecticut.

At each of the fraternities he stole watches, wallets, money and rings.

Stack told police at Rockview that he attended classes at the University of Michigan and Wayne university for several months in order to become acquainted with college life. He wanted to "get the feel of things," he said.

Stack added that he had spent time in prisons for previous burglary and forgery charges. He left with police officials yesterday for Connecticut, where he will be tried.

First Mid-Year Frosh Class To Be Admitted

The College will admit a mid-year freshman class of both men and women in February for the first time since the end of World War II.

In announcing the plan yesterday, President Milton S. Eisenhower explained that "in these emergency times, when industry and the armed force need trained men and women, the College is especially anxious that its facilities be used to the fullest extent."

Completion of new dormitories and the opening of additional classroom and laboratory facilities made the new admissions possible in spite of the present record campus enrollment of 11,160, according to the admissions office.

Dr. C. O. Williams, acting dean of admissions, pointed out that the move will aid recent high school graduates who want to begin college work before becoming subject to the federal draft. Only a few Pennsylvania high schools, including those in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, graduate students at mid-year.

The College will continue to grant admission to a limited number of transfer students and students who have completed work at Penn State centers, Dr. Williams said.

Wreck Yields Broken Bodies

The mangled bodies of Dr. Elliot Alexander and his wife were recovered from the wreckage of their plane on a mountain top near Ogleton last Friday afternoon.

Ground rescue forces were dispatched to the scene of the tragedy immediately after the wreck was discovered at noon Friday by a Civil Air Patrol observer. After a two hour trip through thick underbrush the rescue crew reached the plane.

Died Instantly

Since there were no signs of life, it was believed that the couple died instantly. It was necessary for the crew to tear the plane apart in order to reach the professor and his wife. Both of the plane's occupants suffered fractured skulls, crushed chests, and fractures of both arms and legs.

A heavy fog was believed to have been the major cause of the crash. After taking off from Johnstown on a second attempt, the professor was thought to have circled back to the Johnstown airport and plummeted into the mountain side, 15 miles from the airport.

The professor, from the University of Illinois, was on his way to Penn State to give a lecture to the department of chemistry. The air search for his plane began last Tuesday after the plane was reported missing on Monday. Intervention of bad weather on Monday prevented the search from taking place the preceding day.

Freshmen Exuberant When Customs End

Cheers, green dinks, and torn up pages from freshman bibles filled the air at New Beaver field when freshman customs ended Saturday afternoon between the halves of the Penn State - Temple football game.

The announcement was made over the public address system by Neil See, Tribunal chairman at 3:15, just as the Big White were returning to the field for the second half.

The freshman section of the stands was in a turmoil, and after the cheering for the returning team was over, the upperclassmen watched the demonstration with smiles.

Before the game and during the first half, the frosh had been belting all hatmen who passed their section of the stands with apples. At one point, they even bombarded frothy and the nittany lion when they rode by on a small motor scooter.

Hoist Hatman

After the announcement had been made, however, some of the frosh men grabbed a hatman who was nearby, and hoisting him to their shoulders, carried him down the length of the field and back again. Feeling was good, and the frosh laughed and joked with the hatman during the whole time they were carrying him.

The women were much less enthusiastic than the men, because their customs had been lifted some time before by order of the Women's Student Government association. They joined in the cheers, but none of them took off the green ribbons they were wearing in their hair.

The men tore up their bibles and threw away their black bowties, but almost without exception they kept their dinks "to frame," or to give to their families or girl-friends.

"Thank God"

Some of the comments made by frosh immediately after the announcement were: "Thank God," "It's about time," and "We'll give it to the frosh next year." There seemed to be little resentment against hatmen and upperclassmen once customs were off and the frosh admitted that with few exceptions they had been treated fairly by everyone during the period of customs.

After the game, most of the freshmen still had their hats, although not many were wearing them. They stood in groups around the exits of the field, and in front of their living quarters and cheered hatmen who walked by. There were many offers to trade green hats for black ones.
