Entered as second-class matter July 5, 1934, at the State College, Pa., Post Office under the act of March 3, 1879.

Transfer Device

Students who were able to get hold of a copy of the anti-Reede circular using old newstories from Collegian saw an excellent example of the transfer device used in propaganda.

THE FIRST PAGE is a beauty. On it are the words: "From files of the Daily Collegian." The natural implication is that the publishers of the circular came to the Collegian offices and were allowed to use files there. Such an obvious conclusion carries the further implication that Collegian sanctioned such use of its files.

None of these implications are correct. As we pointed out yesterday, the material was obtained from files in the library, and without any foreknowledge on the part of the Collegian.

Headlines used throughout the circular were placed immediately above reproductions of the Collegian nameplate, i.e., the words "The Daily Collegian" which appear at the top of the front page. Obvious purpose of this device is to give the false impression that the headlines also appeared in Collegian.

BUT THE PERFDY of this technique becomes obvious from the wording of the headlines: "Reede Organizes Radical AVC," "Reede Participates In Subversive ASU," "Reede Says: U. S. Armaments Not Defensive," "Moscow Ch a m p." — Dr. DuBois, "Great American" — Reede," and "Reede Opposes Arming!"

Most of the articles cited were lifted out of their pre-World War II context, with the inference that they represent Reede's present-day views.

If this is clean politics, we shudder at the thought of what dirty politics must be.

Driven To Cover

The administration's rejection of the IFC proposal for chaperoned drinking was not unexpected. Nevertheless, the action disappointed us, inasmuch as we feel a reasonable solution to the drinking problem that would entail a compromise on both sides could be reached and, in the long run, might be a lot better all around.

ADMINISTRATIVE disapproval of drinking will not stop drinking in fraternities or anywhere else—we all might as well face that fact. And if drinking continues, mixed drinking and drinking by minors is sure to continue. It merely will be driven under cover and will result in punishment for violation of a code which will not be adhered to. We think both the idea of rule-breaking and the psychology of drinking on the sly are bad.

The most reasonable plan—and the one most likely to control excesses—would be one which would allow drinking under specified conditions.

Dicta And Bleatings

TO THE EDITOR: To Francis Artley. It is indeed unfortunate that you felt it necessary to write to the editor in protest against "Headline Seekers." What you have witnessed, Francis, is a splendid example of the Jehovah Complex in action. You can see it quite frequently in the Daily Collegian—in the dicta of L. D. Gladfelter, the bleatings of Mr. Degler upon his inescapable soapbox, and in the high-schoolish vanities of a flowery prose by Ron Bonn. You know, of course, they've got the power and we don't. It is a wonder that your letter was printed, since the "error" was rectified in the same issue. It will be more so if this one is printed, or uncut, although my opinions, and I will label them as such, would remain not disproved.

Injustice To Sophomores

TO THE EDITOR: Your reference to the fact that the sophomores did not actively participate in the cheers during the Penn State-Temple football game is unfounded and a gross injustice to the sophomore class. Your statement that cheerleaders were doing all the yelling, is in a respect, also an untruth.

The men cheerleaders appeared, at times, oblivious to the different class sections and it was due to this laxity on their part that the proper spirit was not disseminated. While the new female additions to the cheering squad were attractive and petite, they were incapable at that time to present the cheers adequately.

Ed. Note—Mr. Jaffe apparently misunderstood our comment. From where we sat, the only ones we could hear cheering with any consistency were the frosh and sophs. They as well as upperclassmen could have used their lungs more heartily.

Little Man On Campus

By Bibler

"Well, somebody's got to flunk. Give me a list of the people taking the course as an elective."

bent opponent, for attacks on Reede's military record and for use of the so-called Ex-Servicemen group's aid after stating Monday night that the contest was a personal one between the two candidates. It also cited what it termed several errors in fact in the circular.

Defending his support of peace demonstrations before World War II, Reede said, "All persons who remember my participation will recall that I worked hard to prevent them from being 'taken over' by Communistic elements."

Claims Attack On College

Reede also cited Van Zandt for implying Communist activities at the College were widespread. He said, "Our Congressman denied recently that he had attacked the College as a 'hotbed of Communism.' Let him deny it to anyone who has read these assorted press clippings, usually torn from their context, and all giving the impression that the campus is rife with Communist activities. Of course, injury to the College is a small matter to our Congressman compared to his bid for re-election."

The Statement from Reede's colleagues condemning Van Zandt's tactics said, "Regardless of politics—some of us are Republicans, some Democrats—we all dislike personalities, unproved charges and rumors, and unfounded relections upon the integrity of opposing candidates in any campaign."

It scored Van Zandt for "poor taste" and stated, "We may or may not agree with Arthur H. Reede, but we certainly respect him. We have no doubt of his honesty, loyalty, and competence."

Luther Harshbarger, executive secretary of the PSCA, told the Daily Collegian, "We certainly object to the use in this circular of the PSCA name without any authorization whatsoever." The circular attacked Reede in part on the basis of two articles relating to an advisory position which Reede held jointly in 1935 with Charles P. Hogarth, then associate secretary of PSCA.

Collegian Protests

A Daily Collegian statement yesterday strongly protested the linking of the paper with the attack on Reede. "No permission was sought or given for the 'Ex-Servicemen's League of Blair County, to reproduce the Collegian nameplate," Collegian said editorially.

Collegian erroneously stated in the last paragraph of yesterday's report on the circular that Hugh Manchester was "campaigning for Reede." The words should have been: "campaigning against Reede." Manchester was definitely identified several times earlier in the story as attacking Reede and obtaining material that was used against him.
