Small Crowd Attends Season's Last Pep Rally

By PAUL BEIGHLEY

A small crowd of about 500 students braved light falling snow to attend the season's last pep rally in front of Old Main last night.

Highlights of the program, emceed by Harry Kondourajain, president of Skull and Bones, were the appearance of coaches from three Penn State athletic teams and a skit in which the Nittany Lion took part.

Highlights of the program.

Bill Jeffrey, soccer coach, delighted the crowd by reciting poetry and dancing to the playing of the "Kilties March" by the Blue band. He said he hoped that the crowd at the football game today won't forget that the soccer team is playing Maryland on the other side of the stands.

Werner Speaks

Chick Werner, cross-country team coach, said that the team is the best he has ever had at Penn State. He brought his undefeated runner, Bill Ashenfelter, to the rally with him. The team will participate in the IC-4A meet in New York Monday.

Assistant football Coach James O'Hara, who scouted the Rutgers football team, told the crowd some facts about this afternoon's opponent. He said Rutgers is probably the best team to oppose the Lions at home this year. O'Hara brought 10 members of the team with him. The Lions will finish this year's schedule at Pitt next Saturday.

The rally, which began with a parade from the Women's dormitories to Old Main, was planned to honor all three Penn State teams.

Cabinet Defeats Erickson Motion

A motion presented by John Erickson, senior class president, to thank the Daily Collegian for its coverage of the Campus chest drive was defeated by all-College cabinet Thursday night.

David Ludwig, president of the mineral industries student council, said he did not think it necessary to thank Collegian since committees of Cabinet are not given special recommendation. Stanley Degler, news editor of Collegian, told Cabinet Collegian did not expect praise, and just regarded the drive as regular news coverage.

Robert Davis, all-College president, appointed Jay McMahon chairman of the ice skating committee. William Klisanin was named chairman of the activities and enrollment committees by Davis, and Erickson was appointed chairman of the Coffee hour committee.

Davis Praises Recent Elections

Robert Davis, all-College president, praised the voters in Thursday's freshman and sophomore elections for intelligent voting. He said he was pleased with the high percentage of voters who cast their ballot.

The newly-elected class officers will be inaugurated at the next all-College cabinet meeting, Davis said. The presidents of both classes will take the Cabinet seats now held by Marian Whiteley and Sally Shoemaker, elected last fall.

Davis said this is the first time in three fall elections in which a split ticket has resulted. The all-College president said it was "a healthy sign for campus politics."

The new sophomore class officers elected Thursday night were: William Bair, president; Arthur Rosfeld, vice-president; and Nancy Showers, secretary-treasurer. Bair and Rosfeld were Lion candidates while Miss Showers ran on the State party ticket.

The new freshman class officers are: Gerald Maurey, president; Bernard Kelley, vice-president; and Neida Fralich, secretary-treasurer. All three were State party candidates.

Inter-American Club Elects New Officers

The Inter-American club recently elected Alvaro Chaparo president for the current year.

Others elected were Alvaro Sanchez, first vice-president; Mrs. Leonore Espada, second vice-president; Eduardo Wood, secretary-treasurer; and Luis E. Banks, program chairman.

The Inter-American club is made up of graduate and undergraduate students from Latin America who are studying at the College. The club has been inactive within the past few years, but has been revived this year.

Dr. William H. Gray, professor of Latin American history, is faculty adviser. Monthly meetings, which are conducted in Spanish, are open to anyone interested in Latin American relations.

Gridders Face Rutgers In Final Home Appearance

By MARV KRASNANSKY

Rutgers, one of the leading passing teams in the country, and Penn State, sixth in the nation in pass defense, will try to outsmart each other when the Nittany Lions make their final Beaver field appearance of the year this afternoon.

Kickoff time is 1:30 p.m. An estimated 15,000 will be on hand. The weather is expected to be fair and cold.

This will be the first time the Scarlet and the Lions have met on the gridiron since 1918. Rutgers won that first game, 26-3, but Penn State rates a 13-point favorite to even the score.

The Lions enter the game with a season's mark of three wins, the same number of losses, and one tie. Rutgers has won four, and lost three, and is being considered for the Sun Bowl in El Paso, Tex.

Both Teams Ready

Both teams are expected to be at full strength, with four of Coach Rip Engle's operatives, sidelined in past weeks, expected to be ready for action. Defensive end Pat McPoland, fullback Jim Pollard, and end Mario Santangelo, all of whom did not play against West Virginia, are expected to see some duty tomorrow.

Sophomore fullback Paul Anders, who played some against the Mountaineers, will be available for limited duty also, trainer Chuck Medlar said yesterday.

Although injured slightly in Rutgers' 31-7 victory over Lafayette last week, halfback Jimmy Monahan, defensive halfback Joe Furnari, and defensive tackle Burt Arnold are all expected to play today.

Two Bronze Works On Display In Old Main

Two bronze works, each by a leading American sculptor, are on display for an indefinite time in the foyer of Old Main.

One is a large portrait bust of Philip Sayers by Joseph Epstein. It was loaned by Michael Sayers, the subject's son. The other was loaned by the sculptor, William Zorach, and is the figure of his daughter, Dahlov.

The figure by Epstein was first done in clay while Zorach did his in maple wood. Though both works exhibited are executed in bronze, they represent opposite approaches to the sculptor's art.

Axford, Brenner Call Chest Drive Definite Success

Two officials of the campus chest drive issued a joint statement yesterday in which they hailed this year's drive as a definite success.

Herbert Axford, chairman, and Marlin Brenner, steering committee member, made the statement influenced by an editorial in yesterday's Collegian. This editorial claimed the chest, which missed its goal by 25 percent, was poorly organized and lacked initiative in soliciting.

The joint statement pointed out that this was the first year that such a drive had been held on campus and that mistakes are natural during the first year of such a huge undertaking. It said that officials in following years would profit from these mistakes and predicted that the chest will reach its goal in years to come.

Axford and Brenner extended their thanks and appreciation to the 300 students who aided the chest. They said that the addresses of approximately 2000 students living in town were unavailable, and that they could not be solicited in the manner in which the majority of the students were.

"Next year, however," they said, "the committee will make certain that a complete list of housing cards are available to make Campus chest a success and thereby profit by the experience of this year's committee."

They added that it was evident that organization of the chest must begin the preceding spring. Such a plan would provide a better integrated program of publicity, solicitations, and a series of special events.

"Campus chest was a success this year," they said. "We feel that it is here at the Penn State campus and because of its worthiness will become an institution at Penn State. As years go by, the mistakes made by previous Campus chest committees will be voted and corrected in order to make all future drives a 100 per cent success," Axford and Brenner said.

The drive was held from Oct. 28 until Nov. 10 and had a goal of $14,000. Nearly complete figures showed that about $10,500 was collected during the two weeks.

Luther Harshbarger, executive secretary of the PSCA, called the drive a success despite its failure to make its goal. He pointed out that the chest fostered good will and cooperation between organizations. These were missing, in former years when each group held its own separate solicitation, he said.

Outstanding Books At Pattee Library

The Fifty Books of the Year, examples of outstanding design and production during 1949, are being displayed at the Fred Lewis Pattee Library until Nov. 29.

The books were chosen by the American Institute of Graphic Arts and are circulated by the American Federation of Arts.

More than 700 titles were submitted to the institute. The jury based its selection on excellence of design, typography, quality of manufacture, emotional appeal of design, and relation between editorial content and design.

Members of the jury were John Begg, art director of Oxford University press, New York; Serge Chermayeff, director of the Chicago Institute of Design; and Lewis Gannett, book editor of the New York Herald Tribune.
