

Oh No! Not Again

"WE'RE FORECASTING cloudy and more snow for Friday" was the passing remark made by John Sherrod (in left picture) as he mounted to the roof of the MI building yesterday to put up the weatherflags. The "snow flag" still is in his hand. In the right shot, William Bonner and William Dieiz, meteorology students, look over teletyped weather facts received by the College from Louisville, Ky.

Vacations Disrupted By Rain And Snow

Penn State students screamed bloody murder over the weekend in Pittsburgh as thousands of them were in the City for the Pitt game. There was no place to go—everything was closed, and even if there had been anything open, there was no way to get to it.

One taxicab outside the Fort Pitt Hotel drew more customers than it could possibly have handled—even if it wasn't stuck deep in the snow. In one 15-minute period, 13 people tried to hail the cab.

One staffer reports seeing a tractor floating down the Susquehanna river outside of Harrisburg at the height of the flood in that area.

Altoona merchants got more than they bargained for in Christmas decorations. The center of town was gaily decorated, with lines of holly stretched from light pole to light pole. By Sunday night, the lines were completely covered with that very Christmasy decoration—icicles.

In Philadelphia, the gale crippled about three-quarters of the television aerials in the district. Several men out on dates ended up as weekend guests in the Western part of the state as the storm marooned them in their dates' houses.

Back in Pittsburgh, the football team needed an Army truck to get them to the station Monday morning to catch a train. They, and others caught in the upper part of Pittsburgh, had no way of getting downtown.

Sports publicist James Coogan and his wife and several others in a State party got as far as the downtown district of Pittsburgh and were forced to stay overnight in the William Penn hotel. It normally takes 15 minutes to get from there to the Hotel Schenley where the Penn State football team was quartered, but they couldn't make it.

Footballer Dick Koerber walked nine miles in the snow to get to his home outside of Pittsburgh and give an engagement ring to his girl.

Home Ec Women Receive Awards

Two senior women have been awarded scholarships by the School of Home Economics.

Rose Intorre, 437 W. Beaver avenue, has been presented the Borden Award of $300 given annually to the senior Home Economics major who has achieved the highest all-College average prior to her senior year.

Nancy E. Metzger, 413 S. Allen street, has earned the Ellen M. Stuart Award for the senior Centre county girl who has shown general excellence in Home Economics.

Miss Intorre has compiled a 2.79 all-College average. She is a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman honorary society; Phi Upsilon Omicron, professional home economics sorority; Omicron Nu, home economics honor society; and is a member of the Home Economics Student Council and Club.

Miss Metzger's all-College average is 2.61. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority, Alpha Lambda Delta, Phi Upsilon Omicron, and is editor of Home Economics News and Views publication.

She also won the Ellen M. Stuart high school award in her senior year in State College high school.

Former Psych Prof Attached To Air Force

Dr. Floyd D. Ruch, former assistant professor of educational psychology at the College, has been assigned to the Asiatic theater of operations to work with the U.S. Air Force.

Ruch, a psychologist on leave from the University of Southern California, is trying to determine the effect of the Air Force training program upon flyers in actual combat.

Home Ec Coeds To Get Awards

The sum of $800 is available from the Sears, Roebuck foundation for scholarships to freshman women in Home Economics, Dr. Grace M. Henderson, dean of the School of Home Economics, announced recently.

Dr. Henderson explained that from four to eight scholarships (from $100 to $200 each) will be available each year to freshmen who show evidence of scholastic aptitude, potentialities for leadership and interest in home economics, and who have need for financial assistance. Special consideration will be given to those who are interested in rural communities.

This year scholarships are available to freshmen on and off campus. Application blanks may be obtained from the School of Home Economics and should be completed and returned with the necessary recommendations before Tuesday, Dec. 19. Awards for this year will be made in January.

Free To Speak

Mrs. Anne R. Free, of the School of Home Economics, will speak on "Social Usage" at the Junior Panhellenic council meeting next Tuesday.

'Who's In News' Making Selections

The selection committee of "Who's in the News at Penn State" will complete a list of persons to be included in the publication this week.

It is estimated that 400 students will be selected by the committee. Letters of notification will be sent to those students chosen.

Arthur Benning and Laura Mermelstein share the editorial duties for the publication as editor and associate editor respectively. On the selection committee are Homer Barr, president of the Athletic Association; Barbara Sprengle, WSGA president; Robert Davis, all-College president; and Dean Gladfelter, Daily Collegian editor.

Students are selected for the publication on the basis of their activities and services to the College.
