 lication of one eight-page paper for every two four-page editions. "We don't want to mislead anyone by promising the millennium of an eight-page issue every day, but our revenue estimates, based on an increased assessment, show that we could publish eight pages regularly except for unusual circumstances," Gladfelter said.

Plan 40 Pages
 "Our present schedule allows publication of 28 tabloid-sized pages each week. With an increased assessment, we contemplate printing about 40 pages a week," he said.

If the assessment should be approved by the board of trustees at their January meeting, the enlarged paper should make its appearance at the beginning of the spring semester.

Ads Not Enough
 Such an increase in the size of the newspaper would not be possible on the basis of advertising revenue, according to Owen Landon, business manager. Although increased local advertising has made possible publication of more eight-page papers than anticipated so far this semester, this has been a peak period and there is no indication that the heavy advertising will either grow or continue indefinitely, he said.

Principle reason for expanding the size of the Collegian would be to create more space for campus news, Gladfelter said. Other new features contemplated are increased photographic coverage and inclusion of the major wire news of national and world events, he said.

Engineering Lecture

The senior engineering lecture scheduled for this afternoon has been postponed.

Gross To Work With 4 Lettermen

 Not expected to be around for the season's opener but slated to see plenty of action after the Christmas vacation is Herman Sledzik, a 6-foot 4-inch sophomore from DuBois center. Sledzik broke his wrist in a scrimmage and has been out of action for three weeks.

This year's Nittany Lion team averages six feet two inches in height—a few notches under last year's average when Costa, Schisler, and McMahan brought the average up to over six feet three inches.

The Lions will play four games at home before the Christmas vacation, meeting Ithaca, Syracuse, Rhode Island State, and Washington & Jefferson on the home court. They play their only away tilt at American university.
