

Princeton Gains Lambert Trophy; Army Snubbed

Eastern collegiate football followers are still shaking their heads this morning at the surprise last minute swirl of events which yesterday prompted the selection of Princeton university as the 1950 winner of the Lambert trophy.

The undefeated Tigers thus become the 15th annual recipient of the trophy which symbolizes the college champion of the Eastern United States. The Tigers are the second Ivy League club to win the award. Cornell having won it in 1939.

Obviously the sound thumping administered favored Army by the Naval Academy last Saturday was the cause for many of the participating sportswriters and sportscasters to switch from their original selections. Last week at this time the Knights of the Hudson appeared to have had the valued trophy safely salted away for the third straight time.

Princeton will accept the trophy and the permanent plaque at a luncheon today at Leone's restaurant. Coach Charley Caldwell and a number of Princeton officials will be on hand to accept it.

Princeton's victory was clear cut, as the Tiger piled up a one-sided count in the last two days. Monday a telegram was sent out by the Lambert committee to give those sportswriters who wished to do so an opportunity to change their vote.

Nine teams were named in the balloting by 75 Eastern sportswriters from every section of the East. The first ten teams include: Princeton, Army, Navy, Lehigh, Fordham, Penn, Cornell, Trinity, and Yale.

Penn State's basketball giant, Tiny McMahan, of Hamilton, Ont., is the son of a former Lion football great.

Lions Break Loose
The Lions came back the second half and started building on their lead. Lamie scored on a free throw and a one hander to bring the score to 36-21 before Ithaca could score on a foul shot.

Lamie then caught fire as he connected for three quick goals. Williams, Moore, and Panoples each tallied from the floor and the score stood at 48-24 before Ithaca counted its first field goal of the second half with eight minutes of play already gone.

Williams again scored, this time with a set shot, and he was followed with two goals by Chet Makarewicz and one by Panoples. Henry Osmer got another goal for the Bombers—and then the rains came!
