Marines, Infantry Reach Temporary Safety Near Coast

The two local delegates joined some 150 other college students from all over the country in discussing the conference subject for this year, "The Far-Eastern Policy of the United States—Problems and Objectives of the 1950's."

After a welcome by Major General Bryant E. Moore, superintendent of the academy, at the plenary session of the conference, Lt. General A. M. Gruenther, deputy chief of staff, U.S. army, spoke on security aspects of the conference subject. Dr. Edward M. ### Three-Fold Purpose

The conference, sponsored jointly by the U.S. Military academy and the Carnegie Corporation of New York, had a three-fold purpose. The first was to produce informative discussion on an important feature of the U.S. foreign policy; the second, to test the values and possibilities of a conference organized at a faculty level; and the third, to extend cadet's contacts with their collegiate contemporaries in academic endeavor.

At the concluding plenary session, it was agreed by all groups that the United States must maintain peace and security consistent with a free society of nations, that there must be no compromise in Korea, and that the United States must work toward recognition of Red China as soon as possible.
