Help The College

Chairman Edwin Barnitz of the student en-pliment committee hung out the "help wanted" hingle Monday in a call for student volun-eers to help spike the most pressing danger o the College—a predicted decline in enroll-

WITH THE COLLEGE currently in the midst an expansion program, it can ill afford a arge drop—or any decrease, for that matter,— a its enrollment. Nor can the students, who enefit from a large enrollment because it makes possible a greater range of opportunities m the campus.

In an attempt to minimize the trend toward eclines in enrollment, All-College cabinet earer this year established the committee to fornulate a student program aimed at interesting pore graduating high school seniors in enterng Penn State.

Now, in the face of a sharper decline than had been expected in enrollment, the committee is calling for early action over the Christmas vacation.

Students volunteering for work in the pro-ram will be asked to visit their high schools lext week to "talk up" Penn State among the eniors who will be graduated in February. Peronal contact, rather than sending letters or iterature, should provide a better medium for informing high school graduating classes about he College and for persuading them to come

A LARGE DETACHMENT of students will te needed for this work, even though there are elatively few Pennsylvania high schools which ontinue to graduate classes at midyear. The pommittee hopes to send four or five students b each high school, concentrating principally m Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Erie. Students will be asked to attend high schools from which hey were graduated and where they should be Volunteers have been asked to meet in 418 Md Main at 7 o'clock tomorrow night. Students the come from high schools which graduate nidyear classes and who are willing to give a two hours time over the Christmas vacation to the college will not need a second urging be turn out for the job.

We have the committee will be swamped.

We hope the committee will be swamped with volunteers.

Christmas Dinner

The Penn State Christian association will elp to make the holiday season more enjoyble for all the foreign students on campus by ponsoring a Christmas international dinner at he Episcopal church at 6:30 o'clock Friday

THE PURPOSE of the dinner will be to help he foreign students become better acquainted with each other, and to remove some of the pneliness they would feel being far from their yous season

The meal will be planned by the foreign stulents themselves, and they will arrange the nenu to include the favorite dishes, beverages, md desserts of each country. The students also vill wear their native costumes and represenatives of the many countries will give short alks about their respective homelands.

Such spirit and cooperation among differ-ent nationalities reflect the true Christmas

An Unfortunate Spirit

TO THE EDITOR: As a loyal Syracusan, and an ardent basketball enthusiast, I am' quite proud of the team which represents my school. I am sure that the student body of Penn State must have an equal pride in their marvelous team. It is therefore unfortunate that the spirit of the Penn State fans is not equal to the merit of their athletes. Please understand that I do not say this smugly—I am fully aware of the fact that there are some "Dirty Rooters" among the S.U. students, but I doubt that they have ever shown such complete and deliberate lack ever shown such complete and deliberate lack of sportsmanship as that demonstrated by the Penn State fans at tonight's basketball game. I suggest that in the future the Penn State students show more discipline and good taste in their conduct, not only for the sake of good sportsmanship, but to maintain the high stan-dard which has already been set by your school and its basketball five. A good team deserves good fans—I think that the Penn State boys should have them!

Punishment Fitting The Act

TO THE EDITOR: This is on a subject about which a number of us small men on campus feel rather strongly. Namely, the tree stealing episode of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity last Stealing in any form is not something which one generally is proud of and when it is condoned and encouraged by a group which is supposed to lead and set an example for others, it is especially a shameful thing.

We feel that the punishment should fit the act and should cover the entire group. . . . Here is our suggestion.

1. A fine of $5.00 should be assessed against each member of the Beta Theta Pi house.

2. A one-hundred-dollar fine against the house as a group.

3. On the South East corner of the Beta Theta Pi lawn is a nice spruce tree similar to the one which the thieves stole from the college. We feel that it is no more than just that the members of this honest organization dig up this tree and replant it in the exact spot from which the tree was stolen from the College farm. This should, of course, be done at their own expense and with a guarantee that the tree shall thrive for a period of five years.

Perhaps this could raise their honor standard

An Expanded Collegian

Among the criticisms which plague the editors of any newspaper are complaints about failure to have an item printed in the paper. The request is usually phrased, "We need some publicity on this thing," or "Can I see to it that this item gets in the paper?"

THE DAILY COLLEGIAN, like most other newspapers, cannot grant all of these requests. For the space available for editorial material, which means everything except advertising, is severely limited. Advertising is the source of revenue which makes possible more space for editorial material at the present.

Consequently it is the job of our staff to select only the items most newsworthy, interesting, and timely to be included in the newspaper. As journalists we do not consider such items as publicity for anyone, but as news.

To prevent rubbing a newsman the wrong way, it is usually better to say, "Here is a newsstory I think you may care to have," than to mention the word publicity. This is merely the applied psychology of showing someone the advantage to himself of whatever you want him to do.

Some errors in judgment are made concerning inclusion or exclusion of material in Collegian. But such omissions are errors, and are not intentional. We try to do a complete job of covering the campus, of course.

All this points to the fact that Collegian is inadequate to serve a college population of more than 11,000 students, besides a large faculty and staff, many of whom also read the paper.

EXPANSION IS NEEDED to provide more complete campus coverage, interesting features, and news of more than local importance. International and national news is particularly necessary in these days to provide students with an understanding of current

With the proposed 35 cent per semester increase in the student assessment, Collegian could provide this expanded local coverage and world news. Possibly circulation could be increased for the dormitory areas also.

Comparison of Collegian with papers at Michigan, Iowa, Wisnsin, Michigan State, Minnesota, California, and other leading universities would reveal that, while it compares favorably as far as makeup, editing, and local coverage are concerned, it lags in world news.

It also lags in size. The Michigan News, for instance, runs eight and sixteen full size pages seven days per week. Of course, many of these universities have larger trading areas in which to sell adver-

Of course, we can't promise anybody the moon. Even the Sunday edition of the New York Times has space problems. However, our coverage would be appreciably increased. And it should be well worth the price to the Penn State student.
