World Trade Speech Topic

Delta Sigma Pi, Alpha Kappa Psi, and Chi Theta, Penn State's commerce fraternities, will sponsor the appearance of Willis C. Armstrong, speaking in 121 Sparks tomorrow at 2 p.m.

Armstrong, acting chief of the Economics and Security staff, will address students of the Economics and Commerce department on the topic, "The Problem of East-West Trade." The speech is open to the public.

Armstrong has been affiliated with the State department since 1946, having previously served on the Lend-Lease administration, Foreign Economic administration staff, the War Shipping board, and the staff of the American Embassy in Moscow from 1939-41. He received his M. A. degree from Columbia university and spent some time teaching at that institution.

'Antigone'

He journeyed to Thebes, performed deeds of valor, had a hand in killing the old king, and as a reward was named king himself.

Oedipus and Jocasta, wife of the old king, were married. She was Oedipus' mother, of course, but neither of them knew this. Antigone was one of the children born to them.

An odd relationship was thus formed, with Antigone's father also her brother, and her mother and grandmother the same person, too.

Oedipus eventually discovered that Jocasta was his mother. He put out his eyes when he learned this, and wandered about the world as a beggar. Antigone remained with him.

Antigone's two brothers fought over the kingdom then, and both killed each other. Creon, Antigone's uncle, was named king. He ordered that one brother be buried with honors for defending the city, and the other left unburied for attacking it. Anyone attempting to bury the dishonored one would be killed.

All this has taken place before the play "Antigone" begins.

In her opening lines, then, Antigone is trying to find some way to have her brother buried. The tragedy proceeds from this point.

The play is directed by Warren Smith, with Robert Reifsnider directing the chorus.
