

Coeds View Exhibit

NY Critics Praise Two Former Students

New York music and drama critics are praising two former students of the College. One has shown talent as an opera singer; the other as an actor.

Barbara Troxell, '37, who returns to the campus each spring to sing with the College choir, made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera Company on Dec. 28.

Martin Baum, an undergraduate at the College following World War II, under the name of Martin Brooks, played the role of Hovstad in "An Enemy of the People," which opened recently at the Broadhurst theater.

Brooks 'Fine'

Howard Barnes, New York Herald-Tribune critic, commented "Martin Brooks is fine as the liberal editor who sides with the mayor when the chips are down."

A lyric soprano, Miss Troxell, sang the role of Inez in Verdi's "Il Trovatore." New York critics praised her performance. Virgil Thompson of the New York Herald-Tribune said she "worked charmingly, did everything just right." New York Times critic, Olin Downes, commended her "interesting voice and competence."

Miss Troxell entered the College in the fall of 1933 to major in mathematics. She changed her curriculum to music education when Mrs. Willa Taylor, an associate professor of music education at the College, began to train her.

She first sang in a musical program in her home town, of Nazareth, Pa. when she was only three years old. After completing work on her master's degree she received a scholarship to study with Madame Elisabeth Schumann at the Curtis Institute of Music. She was graduated from Curtis in 1942.

Her first major appearance was with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra. She also was soloist with the Desoff choirs and the

Editor Addresses AAUW Chapter

The need for a well-informed citizenry to carry out the functions of democracy was stressed by Miss Rebecca Gross, editor of the Lock Haven Express, in her address to the State College chapter, American Association of University Women, Wednesday evening.

Some people, she continued, don't read anything but pleasant news, and are therefore not fit to carry out the functions of our government because life isn't that way.

She said another basic reason for being uninformed is that many persons feel they are already educated just because they have a degree.

In urging the AAUW to be informed on current affairs, Miss Gross cautioned that the citizen of the future is going to be less informed unless he looks for information.

Advisers To Distribute Forms For Registration

Envelopes containing forms for registration for the second semester can be obtained from each student's adviser along with his schedule the day before registration, according to the office of the recorder.

Activities cards for all male students will also be distributed at Rec hall at the time of registration.

These activities cards will be available to employers and FBI civil service security checker, and will be of assistance to counseling awards committees, faculty advisers, La Vie, and campus honoraries.

Registration for the spring semester will be held Feb. 1 and 2, 1951. The corrected list for alphabetical registration for the semester, as announced by Ray V. Watkins, College scheduling officer, follows:

CA Roundtable Cancelled

Tonight's meeting of the Christian association sophomore roundtable has been cancelled because of the convocation.

Atomic Power Plants Possible

Ernest E. Thum, editor of "Metals Progress," last Tuesday pointed out to a meeting of the American Society for Metals the problems which must be solved in order to build reactors capable of efficiently producing atomic energy.

Thum, who is also chairman of a working committee of the Atomic Energy commission, said that the possibilities of atomic power are important and he expects that reactors necessary for its utilization will be in operation within ten to 15 years.

He also said that while atomic power plants will not replace steam power plants for the generation of electricity in regions where coal is cheap, it will be of immense value for areas where coal is scarce and for power plants on submarines, warships, and long range bombers.

DuPont Graduate Fellowships Renewed

The E. I. Du Pont De Nemours company has renewed its two graduate fellowships in chemistry and mechanical engineering at the College, Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs, announced last week.

The fellowships, $1400 for single or $2100 for married students, have not yet been awarded. Committees in the Schools of Engineering and Chemistry and Physics will administer the grants.
