

Penn State Cagers Meet Powerful Middies Today

The Nittany Lion basketball team will move over to Annapolis today for a contest with the Midshipmen of the U.S. Naval Academy. The Penn State cagers met Georgetown last night in Washington, D. C.

Due to the late starting time of the game with the Hoyas, the Collegian was unable to obtain the results before it went to press.

Against Navy this afternoon, the Lions will be up against one of those "enjoying one of their best seasons in years" teams which have been dogging Coach Elmer Gross' team all year.

Although the Lions will not have to contend with any "basketball goons" when they meet the Middies (no one over 6 feet 4 inches is admitted to the academy), they will be up against one of the fastest teams to take the court against the Nittanians this season.

So far this year the Navy courtmen have piled up 13 victories against only three defeats, having played all but two of these contests on their home court. As the Middies are allowed to play away from the academy only a few times a year, the Navy passers are almost invincible on their home grounds.

Colgate, who dropped the Lions here last month, also holds a win over Navy as does another mutual opponent, Georgetown. Last Saturday, the Middies took the

Baseball Candidates Report To Rec Hall

It was erroneously stated in yesterday's Daily Collegian that baseball coach Joe Bedenk had asked that last year's varsity report to him immediately.

Bedenk asked that all men interested in trying out for this year's varsity report to him at once in his Rec hall office. Practice will begin Monday for pitchers and catchers.

Head manager Bob Speicher said that applicants for second assistant managers may sign up in the Athletic association office in Old Main now.
