consists of three semesters of equal length running through the entire year. Drawbacks noted by Morse included the trimming of spring and fall sessions to accommodate the summer one, and the fact that the program tends to be wearing on students and faculty.

The quarter system is regularly practiced by western schools. The year is divided in quarters, with students normally attending three and taking vacation during the fourth, but with classes given during all four.

In an emergency, students can accelerate by taking all four sessions.

A switch to the quarter system here, Morse said, would necessitate a revision of the credit schedule, since "semesters" would be shorter. The changes would be so far-reaching that, if put into effect here, they would have to be permanent, he said.

The council is reluctant to initiate year-round plans, Morse said, because the present emergency is likely to continue indefinitely. He said the schemes are "strong medicine," but that they may yet be but in effect.

speed up the service. It was reported that students want the dinner period extended until 6:15 o'clock and the lunch period to start at 11:15 a.m. rather than 11:30. Some students have to wait until 12:50 to eat lunch, making it difficult for those with 1:10 classes to eat in time, it was claimed.

Signs calling for the "stalling" tactics appeared in some West dorm lavatories early yesterday. The protest was said to stem from an incident Wednesday. At that time an estimated 200 Air ROTC students, dismissed at 5:50 p.m., had to wait until as late as 6:30 to be fed when Food Service ran short of food.

Dissatisfaction with the lines and service in the dining halls has been voiced in West dorm council since their opening after Christmas vacation. A committee was appointed several weeks ago to secure changes in the schedule. The group has not reported to council as yet.

Neither council officers or Food Service officials were available for comment last night.

uating from the Military academy, Colonel Bolduc is a graduate of the tank school, infantry school, and the command and general staff school.

Colonel Bolduc was commanding the 3rd Battalion of the 19th Infantry at Schofield barracks, Hawaii, at the time of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941. In 1942 he returned to the United States as executive officer of the 395th Infantry, and later served with the IV, XV, XVI, and XXXVI Corps.

Served In Europe

In 1944, Colonel Bolduc served as executive officer of the 222nd Infantry, a part of the famous 42nd (Rainbow) division. He remained with the 42nd division until the end of the war in Europe, serving at different times as commander of the 222nd Infantry, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3 and the students as an outlet for creative talent as well as being useful in composition classes for examples of good and bad writing.

The English Composition department was mentioned as a possible support since that department stands to benefit most from such a magazine, according to Vaughan.

"If the Inkling is a desirable product, if enough students want to see such a thing, and if a group or any individuals are enthusiastic enough to give us more than moral support, the Inkling will be a reality," he said.

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

Number 12... THE MOURNING DOVE

"Some of them are pretty sad!"

Melancholy and dejected, this gloomy miss found little to titillate her in the recent deluge of quick-trick cigarette tests! She was not enthralled by the idea of judging cigarette mildness with just a fast puff or a single sniff. But, joy of joys! ... happiness came to her when she discovered one test that left no doubt in her mind.

It was the sensible test! ... the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which simply asks you to try Camels as a steady smoke — on a pack after pack, day after day basis. No snap judgments needed. After you've enjoyed Camels — and only Camels — for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste) we believe you'll know why ...

More People Smoke Camels than any other cigarette!
