

Masons To Hear Blue Band Play

The Concert Blue band of the Colege will present a concert at the regular meeting of the Williamsport Consistory of the Free Masons on Thursday night, James W. Dunlop, assistant professor of music education and Blue band conductor, announced.

The concert will feature a coronet trio presentation by soloists John Leister, Eugene Golla, and James Colonna.

Before the concert, Dunlop and the band will be the guests of the consistory at a banquet in the consistory banquet room.

The concert arrangements were made by Dunlop through O. W. Houts, State College businessman active in the Masonic order. Transportation for the band members is being furnished by the Masons. Houts will furnish transportation for the band's musical instruments.

IFC Reports No Hell Week Action

The Interfraternity council board of control has met once but has taken no definite action on the hell week problem, IFC President Harold Leimbach said yesterday.

Leimbach said the subject was discussed at the meeting but that no penalty had been set up. He said the board would meet this week and will take recommendations for penalties to the council at their meeting Feb. 23.

The board of control was given authorization Wednesday night by IFC to regulate hell week activities on campus and to recommend penalties for offending fraternities.

Grad School

(Continued from page one) Dean Wilson, but he was in conference and could not be reached. It seems to me the move shows appointive power."

DeMarino said that cabinet would decide such matters "in the future" but that, in the event that a graduate student is tried in the immediate future, he should be represented on Tribunal. He also said that in the past graduate students who violated regulations were dealt with in the dean of men's office, but this time the Campus patrol referred the violator to Tribunal.

See said that if graduate students who violated traffic laws were supposed to be reported to the dean's office instead of to Tribunal, "they have made mistakes for years." He said such cases often have come before Tribunal but that no protests were made by the violators.

Home Ec Club Elects Officers

Officers chosen at a meeting of the Home Economics club last week were: Betty Anders, president; Eleanor Morisuye, vice-president; Nancy Ferguson, secretary; and Ann Walker, treasurer.

Elected to the club's council were Eleanor Chanko and Jane Strawn, junior class representatives; Constance Matlavage and Lee Coy, sophomore class representatives; and JoAnne Wilson and Rachel Williams, freshman class representatives.

Thirty-nine girls were recently initiated into the club.

Every morning from 9 to 11 o'clock the Home Economics club holds a coffee hour in the living center.

division between a system 'predicated on the emphatic rejection of God' and a way of life which had its origins and has gained much of its strength from the spiritual values of religion—from religion which has been defined in its widest sense as the union of man with God.

"It is well that everyone should comprehend the fundamental cleavage which divides much of the world's population into opposing camps: the cleavage is on the issue of belief in God.

"Communism, rejecting God . . . makes man completely subservient to the state, and to a despotic state at that. Democracy . . . is based on the intrinsic worth and the innate dignity of the individual as a creature of God, and therefore makes man inviolable in his basal human rights," he said.

"This was the point of division," the President continued, "for the extremely materialistic philosophies on which the modern Communist idea is based interpreted all human phenomena in terms of purely physical or materialistic causes and rejected any belief in the supernatural, while the great Christian tradition continued to grow and develop . . ."

Concluding his address, the President said, "Of this we may be sure: In the perspective of future history, the strategic victory—the lasting triumph of this period—will certainly be seen to have been won by the side with the greater moral and spiritual strength.

"If you and I attain the genuine understanding of ourselves and of the cardinal principles of our free society, we will, I know, be better prepared to develop essential understanding of other peoples, cultures and nations. Then, and only then, shall we be prepared to accept our share of citizen-responsibility for building a total program for permanent peace."
