

Edgerton Yugoslav Tour—

Service committee. Edgerton said the others in his group flew to Yugoslavia on Sept. 15, 1950 and spent five weeks there and one week in Greece, studying conditions in the two countries with the aim of gathering as much information as possible to promote better relations and more understanding.

During the last war—American Friends Service groups worked with displaced persons and war victims throughout Europe, India, China, and other parts of Asia.

Visit Cities

Edgerton's committee visited cities, villages, institutions, factories, cooperative farms, and private homes in five of the six Yugoslavian republics.

Edgerton said that at that time Yugoslav papers were presenting full reports of Korean war news from both American news services and major European news agencies, including Tass, official news agency of the Soviet government.

He visited several acquaintances he knew from previous work with Yugoslav refugees in 1944 and 1945. He pointed out that his knowledge of Serbo-Croatian and other European languages helped immensely in establishing contacts in the various areas and also in creating an atmosphere of friendship and understanding.

Chat With Tito

While in Belgrade the committee chatted informally for over an hour with Marshall Tito. Edgerton said that Tito was extremely friendly and was a lively conversationalist.

Edgerton admitted that he and his colleagues were a little wary when they first arrived, but they soon found out that they had a great degree of freedom in traveling wherever they wanted throughout the country.

Around the close of the last war Edgerton worked in Europe with the Quaker group. In addition to working with Polish DP's in Germany and Poland, he worked with Yugoslav refugees in Egypt, the Middle East, and later Yugoslavia.

Religion—

people God is depending upon, he said. Christian laymen must take their responsibility seriously, he claimed. They are working with God's will behind them and are never alone, he said.

The service opened with an organ prelude by George Ceiga. He played "Fantasie in G Minor," and "When in the Hour of Utmost Need." Joan Hutcheon, co-chairman of the program, read from the Bible. The College chapel choir, under the direction of Mrs. Willa Taylor, sang "Cantate Domine" and "Now Let All the Heavens Adore Thee."

Dance Interpretations

The Modern Dance group, directed by Dorothy Briant, interpreted with their dance God's talk with Moses. Miss Briant then did a solo dance, "Jeremiah's Lamentations." The choir sang Mendelssohn's "Cast Thy Burden," and Miss Hutcheon and Emerson Jones, chairmen, read a litany for students with responsive reading by the audience.

The dance group followed with their interpretation of "Go Down Moses," with Carolyn Morris singing a solo. The group performed "Solomon's Prayer at the Dedication of the Temple," with a solo by Betty Jane Strom and a narrative reading by Donald Carlson. Carlson also read the 23rd Psalm as the dance group performed.

After the speech by Sutcliffe, the choir sang Gretchaninoff's "The Lord Is My Light." Jones concluded the services with a reading from the Bible.

Pre-Med Group Holds Mixer Tomorrow

The Pre-medical society is sponsoring a mixer tomorrow at 8 p.m. at the Phi Kappa fraternity house for all pre-medical students at the College.

Skip Ryder's orchestra will supply the music for two hours of dancing. At 11 p.m. several drama students will entertain the group with the presentation of a modern play.

Refreshments will be served at the mixer. There is no admission charge, and students may attend with or without dates.

Edgerton came to Penn State last February directly from the Russian institute at Columbia university.

Taught In France

He was born in 1914 in Winston-Salem, N. C. and received his high school education in Greensboro, N.C. He received his BA from nearby Guilford college and his MA from Haverford college, Pa. In 1937 and 1938 he taught English to French children in Belfort, France.

From 1939 to 1944 and in 1946 he taught French and Spanish at Guilford college. In 1947 he entered the Russian institute where he received his certificate, the equivalent of an MA, and finished his residence work for his Ph.D.

At present Edgerton, his wife, and two children live in State College.

Talent Show—

ners of $25, $15, and $10 will be chosen from those five by audience applause.

Reserved seat tickets for tonight's show are on sale at the Student Union desk in Old Main until 5 p.m. and from 7 to 8 o'clock tonight. Tickets are 84 cents.

John Price will handle lighting and sound for the production. Moylan Mills will be in charge of programs.

Seniors—

nating last semester finals is that seniors are too busy with activities winding up their college careers to do an adequate job of studying for examinations; Erickson said. He noted that seniors spend much of their last days on campus finding a job, moving their belongings and preparing for commencement.
