

Drinking Colloquy Schedule Announced

A schedule and tentative date for the drinking colloquy to be sponsored by All-College cabinet were announced yesterday by James Worth and William Klisanin, co-chairmen of the committee working on the program.

April 20-21 were set as a tentative date for a three-panel discussion on the drinking problem. Experts on varying phases of the problem will be invited to attend the colloquy, Worth and Klisanin said.

Other members of the committee are Jane Auch, Rose Eifert, John Stoult, and John Allison.

Three Panels

One of the three panels will discuss the scientific phases of drinking, another the religious phases, and a third the drinking problem on other campuses.

The colloquy will start with a banquet April 20, which will be followed by the first panel dealing with the scientific aspect of the problem. Plans call for the participation of five experts in this panel.

Two Members

Two members of this panel will moderate each of the other panels. The second panel will consist of a Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish clergymen. They will discuss the religious phases of the problem and will meet on the morning of April 21.

Although attendance at the banquet will be by invitation only, Worth and Klisanin stressed that all panel discussions will be open to students. There will be discussion from the floor, they said.

Everyone Gets In The Act

Saucers Old Stuff; Now Hoops Fly, Too

Has anyone seen a flying saucer, or anything comparable?

State College police are investigating reports of strange objects ranging from "flaming hoops" to "silver balloons," seen in the air over State College during the week-end.

Edward Glatfelter, Nittany dorm 21, said he saw a round object resembling a "silver balloon" over State College about 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Glatfelter and a companion were polishing a car when they sighted the object. Glatfelter said it was no conventional aircraft since it didn't have a tail.

Watched Object

Glatfelter said they watched the object for about two minutes. It looked like the broad side of a disk, or a spherical object, but he couldn't tell the general shape, he said. The object travelled across the sky from right to left, then turned, and just disappeared, Glatfelter said.

Charles Mathues, 324 Hamilton hall, said he and William Phillips, Hamilton hall, saw a strange light in the sky over the Mineral Industries building about 9 o'clock

Alumni Institute To Be Set Up For Reunions

Under the directorship of J. O. Keller, class of '13, the College and the Alumni association will cooperate in establishing an Alumni institute during the class reunions, June 21-23.

President Milton S. Eisenhower has termed the institute a new step in alumni activities. He appointed Keller to head a committee of 22 who will administer the institute.

"The Alumni institute should serve to stimulate alumni and awaken new interests in the College through adult channels of government, science, and society," says Ridge Riley, alumni secretary. He cited the value of an interested and informed alumni.

Four Panels

The plan for the Alumni institute calls for at least four panels which will be offered to alumni with leading educators from the College staff participating.

The committee of 22 is now studying various topics for panel discussion and is selecting prominent faculty members who will serve as "alumni professors." Topics under consideration include approaches to war or peace, the Korean situation, policies in the international field, taxation frontiers in psychology, the field of arts and sciences, and human relations.

The second phase of the institute will include setting up of exhibits by the various schools of the College. An organized tour of the exhibits may be planned for the institute.

Eisenhower To Speak

One feature planned for a panel session is an address by President Eisenhower and a round table discussion which will include the President and his administrative assistants. The discussion would deal with college problems and the relationship of alumni to the College.

Enrollment in the Alumni institute will be limited to alumni and their wives or husbands. It is not limited only to those alumni who are having class reunions that week, but application forms have been made available to any alumni who may wish to attend the institute.

Housing accommodations will be available in the West dorms.

Students To Work, Study In Europe

Opportunities for college students to work and study in France and Great Britain have been announced by the Institute of International Education, 2 West 45th street, New York city.

Positions are available in 40 French schools during the 1951-52 academic year which involve the teaching of conversational English for about 12 hours a week and occasional assistance to the local English professor in his classes. In many cases there is sufficient time for study in a nearby French university.

Candidates should have a good academic record, conversational French, and at least a bachelor's degree by the summer of 1951. Full maintenance while in France is provided under the grant, and some Fulbright travel grants are available to supplement these awards. Those interested should make immediate application to the Institute.

April 15 is the deadline for the acceptance of candidates for the British summer schools to be held this year at the universities of London, Edinburgh, and Birmingham. Courses are especially designed for upperclassmen and graduate students with interest and background in history, the humanities, and the arts. A limited number of tuition or transportation scholarships are available.

The Institute will also provide material on other study opportunities in Europe, Latin-America, and other parts of the world upon request.

The Penn State Christian association will operate the College Sportswear store for one week, beginning next Monday, Marjorie Allen, associate secretary of the PSCA, announced yesterday.

Baldwin will also award a prize of $50 in merchandise or in bonds to the individual student with the highest sales for the week.

Vernon Nash Deems UN 'Worthless'

"The United Nations is worthless; it has defied the experience of previous ages," declared Dr. Vernon Nash, president of the United World Federalists, in a speech at State College high school Friday night.

In stating the definite need for a common world government, Nash said that there is a need for good government at world level, and that the leagues and alliances in the world have lasted as "long as a Hollywood marriage."

Nash also said that the cost of world government could be carried on a small fraction of what the United States and several other countries are spending for armaments now.

"Common world government must be created," he continued. "Until it is created, countries will continue the armament race. However, world government would be no guarantee that civil wars would not occur within the countries; no government is a guarantee for that."

In the event of another war, Nash said, the United States would be at a decided economic advantage in comparison to Russia. According to Nash, Russia is now putting 25 per cent of its national income into armaments while the United States is putting but 7 per cent of its national income into arms.

Negotiations With Russia Necessary Says WA Council

Neotiation with Russia must be made if World War II is to be averted and the armament race discontinued.

This was the consensus of the World Affairs council, which met in Philadelphia Saturday, as reported by William Klisanin. He was a guest of the council.

Tom Hamilton, chief of the United Nations bureau of the New York Times, said appeasement must be defined. It is impossible for any power to negotiate without losing portions of the program that nation advocates. Concessions must be granted, he said.

There are three points to negotiations, Gilbert F. White, president of Haverford college, said. There must be disagreement, a desire for agreement, common interest, and mutual benefits to be gained.

Scabbard And Blade At College Since 1912

By PAUL BEIGHLEY

Extinction of the traditional hatred of military drill and the regarding of it as a necessary evil is the ultimate goal of Scabbard and Blade, national military honor society for advanced ROTC students.

The society, founded at the University of Wisconsin in 1904, first appeared at Penn State in 1912 when Company H, first regiment, was founded. It was the eighth unit of the organization, which is now located in 103 colleges and universities.

Membership in the society is by election only and is divided into four classes: active, alumni, associate, and honorary. Active members are chosen from cadet officers of advanced Army, Navy, or Air ROTC units of the institution where the company is located. Alumni members are members no longer enrolled in the ROTC program or in college.

Associate Membership

Associate membership in Scabbard and Blade includes civilian university officials, faculty members, and active or retired officers of the U.S. armed forces, reserve, or the national guard. Honorary members are civilians elected into the society for achievement or valuable service in the promotion of national defense.

Purpose of company H here is primarily to aid in raising the standard of military education at the College by encouraging and fostering the essential qualities of efficient military students, and promoting friendship and good-fellowship among the cadet officers.

In addition, the company desires to promote a better understanding of the military aspect of life by creating a respect for the cadet uniform and the principles for which it is worn in the student body at the College.

Service Available

To help achieve this goal, the company has made the services of its honor guard available for the inauguration of President Eisenhower, the coronation of Miss Penn State, the flag raising prior to each of the home football games, and other similar occasions.

Officers of the organization, which annually presents the Military ball, are Robert Houseworth, captain; Thomas Reese, first lieutenant; Dale Campbell, second lieutenant; and Harold Birch, first sergeant. These offices correspond to the normal president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary of other campus honoraries.
