Senate Committees OK More GI's To Europe

WASHINGTON, March 13—(AP)—Two powerful Senate committees today approved President Truman's plan to send four more American divisions to Europe, but they reserved the right of Congress to authorize all future troop assignments abroad.

The action of the Foreign Relations and Armed Services committees was interpreted by Senator Connally (D-Tex) as a guarantee that the United States will now move swiftly to reinforce the international army being raised under the command of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Troops To Go To Europe
"It removes any doubt as to whether these four divisions will go to western Europe," declared Connally, who presided at the joint meeting of the committees. He said the unanimous vote should "encourage General Eisenhower and his collaboration with the military forces" of the European allies.

While Connally was pleased with the "clear cut approval" given to the President's plans to send four additional divisions across the Atlantic, he said he did not like the effort to tie the chief executive's hands in the matter of future troop deployment. He may try to amend or defeat this provision when the question is debated in the Senate, he said.

Private Meeting
The two committees met privately today to pass on a pair of resolutions delineating Senate sentiment on the controversial troops-for-Europe issue.

Connally reported they adopted two identical resolutions, one re-

Penn State Plays Host To Debaters

Twenty-one Pennsylvania colleges will take part this weekend in the 16th annual Penn State debaters convention, Marlin Brenner, convention manager, said yesterday.

Brenner said the convention scheduled for Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, will be a model congress styled after the national and state legislatures. He said the committee system will be used and participating colleges will be assigned to committees.

Three Penn State students are convention officers. Clair George is first vice-president, Edward Shanken is secretary, and Edwin Leftkowitz is hospitality chairman. Other officers are Louis Manderino, St. Vincent's, president, and Larry Collins, Lehigh, second vice-president.

State Students
Penn State students participating in the convention itself will be Arnold Aikens, Yvonne Carter, Joyce Buchanan, Joan Dobson, Bernard Friedman, John Harris, Jay Headly, Sanford Hertz, Constance Matlavage, Barbara Menapace, Lois Pulver, and Lionel Wernick.

Brenner said three committees have been formed to date. They are the welfare state committee and two non-Communist organization committees. He said other committees will be assigned when the need arises.

Many colleges have pet bills which they will try to get through the legislature, Brenner said. He said a college's success at the convention is measured by the bills accepted by the entire convention body.

Brenner said officers for next year's convention will be chosen

Cecil Brown To Speak At Forum

Cecil Brown, well-known Mutual Broadcasting system commentator, will take the place of Eric Johnston on the Community forum program, Clayton Schug, forum chairman, said yesterday.

Schug said negotiations were still in progress between the forum committee and Johnston, recently appointed national Economic Stabilization director. He said Brown's appearance, scheduled for May 3, would be a program "bonus" if Johnston also agrees to speak here.

Johnston, originally scheduled to speak Jan. 16, informed the committee early in January that his new government position prevented him from appearing on the program at that time.

Brown's appearance on the program will follow that of Emily Kimbrough, the next regularly scheduled speaker. Miss Kimbrough, lecturer and co-author of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay," will appear April 19.

'Show-Off' Features Realistic Costumes

When some of the female members of the cast of "The Show-Off," take the stage tomorrow night they will be wearing dresses which had been lying for over 20 years in the attics of State College residents.

George Kelly's comedy, the next Players' production, will be presented in Schwab auditorium Thursday through Saturday.

57 Students To Give Blood

Fifty-seven students will give blood to the Red Cross tomorrow at the Altoona undergraduate center.

The students were contacted by the Association of Independent Men, Interfraternity council, Alpha Phi Omega, Panhellenic council, and Leonides. They will leave in special buses supplied by the Red Cross at 12:30 o'clock from the rear of Old Main.

Harold Leinbach, president of Interfraternity council, said this drive was not the regular Red Cross drive which will be held at the College later in the semester. Leinbach said these blood donations were an emergency measure to help the Altoona center fill its donor quota.

The Association of Independent Men has supplied 22 students, Interfraternity council 10 students, Panhellenic council and Leonides five students each, and Alpha Phi Omega 15 students.

Also represented on the committee for a campus-wide blood drive are the State College Red Cross and the State College Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The play takes place in the early 1920's, the pre-flapper era, the day of the long skirts reaching to the ankles and the almost non-existent waist lines.

W. H. Walters, director, and Marilyn Wilson, costume manager, first planned to rent the costumes, but then got the idea of borrowing them from local residents.

Treasure Unearthed
Casual inquiries among faculty and students unearthed some material, but the real treasure trove was discovered in the house of Mrs. Thomas Staley of State College. Neatly stored in Mrs. Staley's attic were almost all of the dresses needed for the show.

In order to preserve the atmosphere of the play, Walters decided also to discard the idea of using a realistic set, but to one which would, in his words, "provide the proper atmosphere for a costume comedy which is really a comedy of character."

Stylized Set
Therefore the set, designed by Joyce Rexford and Harry Woolver, students in set design, will serve as a stylized shell in which the performance will take place. The idea of the interior of a house furnished in the style of the 1920's will be maintained, but

Eisenhower Announces Cut; Also Asks More State Fee Support

By RON BONN

Penn-State's faculty will be reduced 15 per cent for the coming biennium, because of expected enrollment drops, President Milton S. Eisenhower told a faculty meeting in Schwab auditorium yesterday.

The President also called on the state to assume a greater proportion of the cost of resident instruction, revealed an agreement to train Air Force personnel on campus, and announced the appointment of a number of new committees, including one to study the high cost of books to students.

Predicting a 20 per cent drop in average full-time enrollment during the next biennium, the president explained that the 15 per cent faculty cut is the minimum necessary. He said part of the reduction will be accomplished through assigning faculty members to research projects, which he expects to increase because of the present national emergency. A further reduction can be obtained through not filling vacancies as they occur, he said.

Predicts Enrollment Drop
The President explained that draft legislation now in Congress would almost certainly cut average annual enrollment from its present 10,000 down to 8000 over the biennium. He predicted adoption of a modification of the "Trytten report," with deferments for top fractions of each class.

Speaking of deferments, the

Public Eating Places Granted Price Increase

WASHINGTON, March 13 (AP)—The government today allowed public eating and drinking places to raise menu prices to reflect actual increases in food costs. At the same time, it banned any increase in their pre-Korean price margins.

The Office of Price Stabilization (OPS), which issued the order effective April 1, said this will result in some rises in restaurant menu prices, and price rollbacks for those restaurants which increased their margins after July 1, 1950.

Marion W. Isbell, chief of the OPS restaurant branch, said at a news conference that he expects fewer than half of the eating places to raise their prices in April if food prices don't go above the present levels.

He added that he does not expect such a rise in food prices.

In a formal statement, OPS Director Michael V. DiSalle said the new regulation forces restaurants to cut prices when food costs decline.

It requires them to keep the ratio between their total food costs and their total sales no higher than it was in a 12-month pre-Korean "base period."

Each restaurant can choose as its base period either the calendar year 1949 or the 12 months ending June 30, 1950.

The regulation does not require the restaurant to maintain the pre-Korean margin on any particular item—like coffee, ice cream, or mashed potatoes—but only governs the overall margin between food costs and total sales.
