Dormitory Tribunal Is Not Necessary

West dorm council this week heard a pro-posal for organization of a West dorm tribunal. Work of such a judiciary body would consist of trying men accused of violating study hours and otherwise causing disturbances or destroy-ing property, according to the proposal. A NUMBER OF DISADVANTAGES of the plan are apparent. First, the existing Student Tribunal has proved itself adequate for handling all reported violations by male students. Too, working in cooperation with the dean of men, Tribunal and the administration have obtained an understanding of what can be and is expected of each by the other as relates to regulation of student conduct.

student conduct. Tribunal positions are filled on an appointive basis by All-College cabinet, central student government agency. In that manner, Tribunal is a judiciary group of and for all male students. Were the West dorm council to organize a special judiciary group, even though its juris-diction would not extend beyond the West down area creat confusion would result. dorm area, great confusion would result. Which body—Student Tribunal or the West dorm tribunal—would have jurisdiction in a case involving illegal parking in the West dorm area? Or in a case involving a West dorm student and one from another area? Creation of a male student supreme court to unsnarl such problems would appear a necessity then.

Organization of a West dorm tribunal would involve additional and overlapping dealings with the dean of men's office. And if West dorms was to have a tribunal, why not similar bodies also for the Nittany-Pollock and Town councils and for Interfraternity council, if those groups so desired? EXISTING AGENCIES, both student and ad-ministration, thus far have proved adequate West dorm tribunal simply would be one more addition to a campus bureaucracy which, in some respects, already is showing need for con-solidation and reorganization.

Influenza Shots

This is the last week for students to obtain special influenza vaccination shots at the dispensary. Those who wish to take advantage of this College service will have to do so by

Saturday. Under the program, operated by the health service, injections of the new A-Prime vaccine are being made available to undergraduate and graduate students at 50 cents per student. They are available from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1:30 to 5 p.m. Airmen On Campus

For the next 15 weeks, there will be a steady flow of Air Force trainees onto campus to re-ceive instruction in administrative work. Since many of these men will be far from their home towns and under military regulation, their days here won't exactly parallel those of civilian students.

A fitting and friendly gesture on the part of Penn State students would be to welcome the airmen, in some manner, to the College and to invite their participation in student activities. Just what type of program could be organized is uncertain. That could be worked out in a conference of student, administration, and Air Force officers. Some 600 airmen wilt be here at the peak of the training program, the first of the group arriving this week. Immediate planning is necessary if a student project is to be initiated. —J. A.

Spartan Youth Out Of Date

The days when physical prowess was an essential asset to every young man seem to be gone with hardly a passing sigh. Spartan youth is no longer the fashion, and a good healthy tubercular cough is the mark of today's college man of distinction. Naturally, the whole situation stems from the Washington lottery.

A FRIEND OF OURS was just classified 4F. He was classified could stick around for a while. 4F because the doctor said, "Read The thing that would be rough the chart," and our friend said, would be telling all his healthier "What chart?" and the doctor friends at school about it. He said, "The chart on the wall," and stiffened himself for the jeers our friend said, "What wall?" and healthier so he flunked his physical. He is now, suddenly, a Person-

His first inkling of his new status as a major figure came on his arrival home after the successfully failed examination. He informed his family of the unhappy result and a doting aunt handed him a ten spot and said, "Go celebrate."

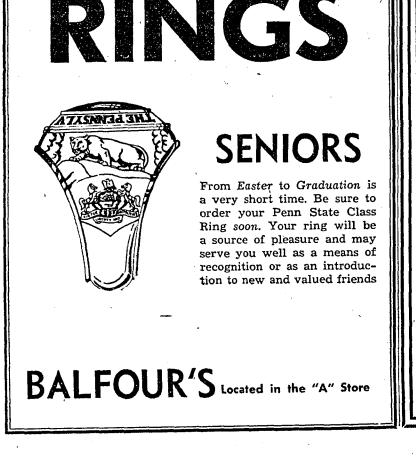

Well that, he felt, was to be expected. H is family was biased enough not to care about his status as a physical wreck, just so he

THE REACTION HE GOT was not jeers and taunts. It was a uniform, "Why, you lucky son-of-a-gun, why you and not me?" His back was pounded, he was informed in off-key but well meant song that he's a jolly good fellow, and was all but carried across New Beaver field by a hat society. Everywhere he went, word preceeded him. His hand was mashed and pulped from be-
