STAR IN MOVIE—Barbara Klopp and William Whiteford, students at the College, are featured in a film depicting student life on the campus. The motion picture is a 20-minute color reel, entitled "This Is Penn State," and will be released soon throughout the state. The film is designed to be of interest to graduating high school students, giving an inside look at college life at Penn State, both in the classroom and in various other activities. All roles in the picture are played by actual students and faculty members, and all the scenes were filmed on the campus. Loan prints are available to interested groups without charge through the Audio-Visual Aids library at the College.

Debaters Propose Welfare Department

A bill to include a Department of Welfare in President Truman's cabinet was accepted as the 16th annual Penn State debaters convention wound up a three-day mock Congress March 17.

The majority report of the welfare state committee, one of three convention committees, was adopted after being amended by the minority to include a social security program.

Previously, the more than 100 delegates who attended the convention accepted the minority report of committee one on non-Communist organization to strengthen the non-Communist nations by giving more power to the United Nations.

Majority Report

The majority had asked for a completely new non-Communist set-up having no connection with the UN. The Penn State delegation supported the minority report.

The delegates chose officers for next year's convention. They are Robert Gardner, Pittsburgh, president; Frank Jones, Westminster, first vice-president; and William Stafford, Lehigh, second vice-president. The secretary will be chosen from next year's Penn State team.

The College team led the minority move to amend the welfare department proposal to include a social security division. Education and health divisions were already provided for in the bill.

'Gavel Girl'

Gail Harvey, Seton Hall, was named "Gavel Girl" at the convention banquet. She was awarded a silver gavel for being the girl at the convention with the best combination of charm, intelligence, and oratorical ability.

Four College students were officers for the convention. They were Clair George, first vice-president; Edward Shanken, secretary; Marlin Brenner, convention manager; and Edwin Lefkowitz, hospitality chairman.

College Delegation

Members of the College delegation included Arnold Aikens, Joyce Buchanan, Yvonne Carter, Joan Dobson, Bernard Freidman, John Harris, Jay Headley, Sanford Hertz, Constance Matlavage, Barbara Menapace, Lois Pulver, and Lionel Wernick.

College groups participating in the convention were Slippery Rock state teachers, Dickinson, Lehigh, Pittsburgh men, Pittsburgh women, Allegheny, Carnegie Tech, Duquesne, Gettysburg, St. Francis, Seton Hall, Mount Mercy, Albright, St. Vincent's, Washington and Jefferson, Westminster, Geneva, Juniata, Temple, Penn State men, and Penn State women.

IRC Delegation To Take Part In Model UN

Representatives from the International Relations club leave today for Beaver College, Jenkintown, Pa., to participate in the annual Model General Assembly of the United Nations.

The IRC representatives will attend the general assembly meeting then will break into four committees to consider various resolutions. Penn State's delegation will represent the United Kingdom.

George Keenan is chairman of the United Nations machinery committee. Robert Alderdice and Jay Headley are also members of this committee.

William Klisanin, past president of Model United Nations, will present a resolution to the economics committee on financing of full employment in regards to restriction on international trade.

Other resolutions will be considered by Albert Hand and Jack Palmer in the political committee. Each resolution passed will be presented to the general assembly on Saturday for acceptance.

Miriam Kugelman will be representing Penn State in the Trusteeship Committee.

Accompanying the group of eight will be Dr. Elton Atwater, political science professor and advisor of the IRC.

Glee Club To Hit 5 Cities In Tour

The Penn State Glee club will perform in five cities on its annual spring tour next month, Frank Gullo, director, said Saturday.

During the week of April 9, the club will sing in Reading, Allentown, Pottsville, Wilmington, Del., and Philadelphia.

The Glee club has been touring since 1888, the year of its organization. The first tour included concerts in Bellefonte, Huntingdon, Tyrone, Philipsburg, Clearfield, and other nearby communities.

In contrast to this horse-and-buggy tour, the Glee club made a coast-to-coast tour in 1913 and sang in London, Oxford, Paris, Brussels, Antwerp, and the Hague in 1928.

The Varsity Quartet composed of Bruce W. Tharp, Shamokin; Robert C. Neff, Alexandria; John A. Cox, Mount Union; William R. Detweiler, Chalfont; and Eugene J. Stohn, Mahoney Plane, accompanist, will accompany the club.

Dr. Ferguson To Head College Advisory Council

Dr. John H. Ferguson has been named to head the newly formed College Advisory Council, a faculty group which will study administrative and policy matters.

Dr. Ferguson is a professor of political science at the College. Mary Jane Wyland, professor of education, was named vice chairman; and Dr. Corliss R. Kinney, professor of fuel technology, is secretary.

The organization meeting was held two weeks ago.

The three officers will set up the council's agenda. Dr. Ferguson said that faculty members with matters for consideration may submit them to the representatives of their school or to the council.

The advisory group, composed of 25 representatives of the nine schools and central extension, will consider material either submitted to it or brought up by members. President Milton S. Eisenhower suggested formation of the council.
