headed by the attorney general—the very same man charged with the duty of enforcing the provisions of the bill. Appeals are to be taken to the Dauphin county court.

Constitutionality Questioned

The question of constitutionality has been raised and the doubts are such that Sen. Pecham is having the attorney general work the "bugs" out of the bill. One of these so-called bugs was indicated by Sen. Maxwell S. Rosenfeld (D-Phila.) in debate on the floor.

"There is nothing in the title of this bill," Sen. Rosenfeld said, "that has anything to do with the organizations, and yet the body . . . deals with organizations, subversive organizations, and foreign subversive organizations . . ."

The bill is unconstitutional for this reason alone, Sen. Rosenfeld said.

The feeling in informed Harrisburg political circles is that the bill as it now stands will not be passed by the House. There also seem to be some doubts as to whether Gov. Fine will sign it.

The governor, it is said, will think twice before signing a piece of legislation opposed by the president of the state bar association, a former justice of the U. S. Supreme court, and college presidents and officials.

Should the bill pass the House, Fine will really be on the spot.

Police To Handle Church Complaints

Gambling complaints received from the State College Council of Churches were referred to the state police at Rockview and Borough Police Chief John R. Juba, E. L. Willard, district attorney in Bellefonte, said in a letter Wednesday.

The letter was sent to V. D. Bissey, secretary of the council. This group sent the letters of complaints on gambling violations to law enforcement agencies earlier this week.

Willard, in his letter, asked the council for further information and promised quick action according to the law.

Judge Ivan Walker, who also received a letter from the church council, said prosecution of the violations will have the full support of the court.

Sam's Other Hemisphere."

Functions Of Theater

"It is one of the functions of the university theater to present plays that would not ordinarily be seen on the commercial stage," Smith said in an interview yesterday.

"John Bull' is a pertinent as well as an amusing play," he said. "After all, 'Man and Superman' was not popular until after Maurice Evans' recent production."

GSA Receives Bid For Rec Hall Job

A second bid for the construction of the proposed Recreation hall addition has been received by the General State authority.

The new low bid of $744,000 was submitted by the Baton Construction company of Philadelphia. The bid calls for the elimination of a 21-foot section of the construction to keep the cost of the project within the allocation.

New bids were also received for the heating and plumbing of proposed dairy barns at the College. The new bids were: Plumbing, Riggs Distler and company, Philadelphia, $70,900; heating, Francis J. Gannon, Harrisburg, $22,987.

Bill Will Expand Course At College

A new measure in the state House of Representatives seeks to expand the labor management course at the College.

The bill, submitted yesterday by Representatives John T. Welsh and Martin J. Taylor, would establish a special advisory committee to direct the expanded program.

The committee would be made up of labor and management representatives as well as private citizens, the Associated Press reported. The measure would provide $250,000 to conduct the expanded program. A total of $75,000 would be used to purchase teaching aids and for research, with the rest to be available for training costs.

Prof Nelson Elected To National Society

G. Kenneth Nelson, assistant professor of accounting, has been elected a member of the American Institute of Accountants, national professional society of certified public accountants.

Prof Nelson previously taught at the University of Illinois. He became a member of Penn State faculty in 1950.

AIM--

1. Give the individual councils the right to elect their representatives to the board in any way they desire.

2. Allow committee chairmen to be either ex-officio members or members of the board of governors.

3. Change election districts to no more than 200 male independent students.

4. Specify that elections of representatives to the board must be held within the first three weeks of each school year.

5. Include delegations from councils in the responsibility of handling the election of representatives and council officers.

6. Specify terms of office for board members, heretofore undetermined.

A proposed amendment to the constitution concerning grants and loans to councils was not accepted because it had not been passed by two-thirds of the individual councils. Each council will submit its written proposals concerning grants and loans to the board treasurer so the amendment may be revised.

The board heard reports from Durek and Paul Zaroni on the National Independent Student Association convention. Durek and Zaroni represented the board at the convention.

Council Explains Cards

The activities card system was explained at a meeting of the Mineral Industries Student council. David Ludwig, president of the council, appointed John Ruffner and Richard Young to the committee to take care of the activities cards of students in the School of Mineral Industries.

Co-Operative

A new cooperative for business women, professional women and graduate students is now being organized. Interested persons may write in care of Collegian Office or PHONE 3456.
