West Dorm Council Half-Cocked Again

Once again, it appears that the West dorm council has gone off half-cocked.

AT ITS MEETING this week, the council voted to withdraw the remainder of its funds from the Association of Independent Men's treasury. A member of the council, in making the original motion, suggested that the rest of the member councils do the same. He charged the AIM treasurer with inefficiency, and stated that the AIM treasury had a deficit.

The original motion was amended to include only the West dorm council, which asked that $176 due it by the AIM be transferred to the council's budget. The council acted without investigating either the charges or the state of the budget. AIM President Richard Bard said that there had been no money in the treasury while a division of funds between Interfraternity council and AIM was being decided upon.

Yet, the council acted either in ignorance of these facts, or ignoring them.

NOW, MEMBERS of the council claim that the motion was made in order to get the necessary money for the West dorm houseparty, more than a month away. They say that the motion was made at the request of the treasurer, who was not at the meeting. Yet no mention of the use of the money was included in the motion, a rather unusual practice, and the member who introduced it suggested that the other councils be included in the demand for the money owed them. The other councils have no part in the West dorm houseparty.

It would seem that the council members who are now saying that the money was needed for the houseparty have seized upon a convenient cover-up for the rather brash action it has already taken.

The incident of the council's voting to bypass Russell Clark, director of housing, for some justified or imagined slight still hangs around any action taken by the council.

AT THE SAME MEETING that the money question was taken up, it was suggested that if Clark failed to see things the way the West dorm council did as regards the question of laundry case service in the area, the council would "go over his head." The council is planning a survey of its residents on the matter.

Clark gave them the reasons for his refusal. The council gave none for the granting of the service other than that it would be convenient.

Student government at Penn State has a lot to say about what goes on on the campus. Is its power to be impeded by having one of its component parts acting like a spoiled child every time someone crosses it, and crying "Mama" when vexed? Or will that part mature and learn to fit into the pattern of regulation laid down by many years of experimentation?

THE WEST DORM COUNCIL has not completed its first year on campus yet, and mistakes are natural. They can be valuable if the council learns by them.

Clothing Drive

The Inter-Church fellowship of State College will be gathering clothing for Korea again today. As has been stated on many occasions by various civic and government leaders, the need for garments of all kinds is great. Uprooted by the fighting, Korean civilians had to face the winter months ill-clad and without shelter.

With spring weather arriving in State College, many have cast aside winter clothing which they will not be using again. A phone call this morning to the Westminster foundation, 2942, will bring a campaign representative to pick up such clothing this afternoon. Look around the room now to see what you have to give.

'How' To Attain Goal Held Immaterial

TO THE EDITOR: In a recent article on "Campus Party Platforms" Herbert Stein debased the committee as a body to work for lowering the cost of text books, yet no other method for the achievement of this party plank was suggested. It is a fact that the vast majority of our domestic policies in the national government are formulated in the committees of Congress which seems to the government to be the best method available under existing conditions, and constructive policies have been determined by the Legislative Reorganization committee and other special committees. If a better method than the committee is available, I am sure that both the campus parties and our government would be very gratified to be exposed to it.

The parties were also criticized on grounds that they did not give the details as to the methods they proposed to employ in achieving their proposed platforms. Apparently Mr. Stein has not read many party platforms for it is not a common practice for a party to express in detail and elaborate upon how the party intends to attain its goal. "How" the party plans to attain its goal is immaterial, the significant factor is that it accomplish its goal.

Penn State Graduate Scares North Koreans

Lieutenant Lawrence Sloan, now fighting with UN forces in Korea, was graduated from Penn State in 1949. Recently his wife, Jean, a junior in advertising, received the following clipping from the Korean edition of Stars and Stripes:

"North Korean officers are awaiting a good look at the giant who left his footprints on the north bank of the Han river recently after an American patrol visited enemy territory.

"Their man is Lt. Lawrence A. Sloan, platoon leader in Fox company of the 15th Infantry regiment, who stands a half inch over the six-foot-six mark and wears size 14 EEE shoe pacs.

"The lieutenant has been a real enigma to supply sergeants. He has been waiting a long time in vain for a pair of suspenders which will stretch satisfactorily over his frame. He recently lost his trousers jumping a ditch, bringing down a curse upon the head of the supply officer.

"American intelligence has learned that Lieutenant Sloan's footprints have caused Communist intelligence much bewilderment."
