for deferring high school graduates planning to enter college, but Hershey predicted that they would be taken care of.
"The great mass of college freshmen will assemble freely next fall without interference from selective service," Hershey said.

Should Wait

"High school seniors should wait a few weeks to find out what Congress does," he said. "I doubt seriously that they will be inducted before next fall even if they don't go to college."

The Congressional action in question is the forthcoming joint Senate-House meetings to settle differences in a draft-universal military training measure passed recently. The House bill contains the Kilday amendment, which forbids automatic deferment on the basis of scholastic ability. The Kilday measure gives the local boards full power to grant or withhold student deferments.

Monthly Reading Hour Held in Home Ec Bldg.

The sixth monthly reading hour of the 1950-51 series was held last night in the Home Economics living center.

Patricia Hathaway was chairman of the program which featured Kathryn Scheetz, who read Carl Ewald's "My Little Boy," Herald Fahringer, who read "Beach Red" by Peter Bowman, and Regina Friedman who read A. A. Milne's "The Romantic Age"—Act II. The program was open to the public.

Chemical Engineering Group Plans Convention At Bucknell

Chemical engineers from the College will attend a regional convention at Bucknell university this week-end.

More than 125 delegates from student chapters at 11 schools in the Middle-Atlantic area are expected to register for this regional convention of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, according to James E. Hunt of White Plains, N. Y., and Donald S. Parsons of Cranford, N. J., co-chairmen of the convention committee.

William T. Lewish of Elmira, N. Y., is president of the host chapter.

Universities that will be represented at the convention, besides Penn State, include West Virginia, Virginia, Maryland, Pittsburgh, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Lehigh, John Hopkins, Catholic, and Lafayette college.

The program will consist of a tour of Bucknell's laboratories and a technical session at which each school will present at least one technical paper. Prizes will be awarded for the best paper.

Principal speaker at the convention will be Dr. Hubert N. Alyea, associate professor of chemistry at Princeton university, who will speak on the topic, "Atomic Energy: Weapon for Peace." During the war Dr. Alyea carried on research for the office of scientific research and development both in Washington, D. C., and in the Pacific area.

Penn State football players who took part in a spring scrimmage with Army at West Point in 1947 found it necessary to push their bus for two miles on the way up. It ran out of gas.

Three Profs. Present Bacteriology Papers

Three technical papers were presented by members of the Department of Bacteriology at a meeting of the Allegheny branch of the Society of American Bacteriologists in Pittsburgh.

The papers were "A Study of the Endoproteases of Some Oxidative Type Yeasts" by Stephen A. Szumski and J. Frank Cone; "Xanthine as a Possible Intermediate in Uric Acid Catabolism by Clostridium Acidi Urici" by Sidney M. Beck and Jay V. Beck; and "Mechanism of Biosynthesis of Penicillin Using C 14" by Esther L. Martin, John N. Tome, Carl W. Godzeski, and R. W. Stone.

The program was arranged by Dr. Charles D. Cox, associate professor of bacteriology and president-elect of the organization.

Jackson Named Member Of Fellowship Committee

Dr. Lyman E. Jackson, dean of the School of Agriculture, has been named a member of the selections committee of the Frank R. Pierce foundation fellowships.

The foundation was formed to give county agents and assistants cash grants and tuition for advanced study. It was created in the memory of Pierce, first president of Dearborn Motors corporation, by the Dearborn farm equipment distributors.

In addition to serving on this committee, Dr. Jackson has been named to serve on several other similar groups awarding special fellowships and scholarships.
