

Blanding Lists 5 Points For Better Citizenship

By JOAN KUNTZ

Sara Gibson Blanding addressed the WSGA convocation Tuesday night in Schwab auditorium, presenting five points to consider "In the Time of Our Lives."

"Leadership, ability to follow good leadership, intellectual integrity, emotional maturity, and religion are the qualities we need to make better citizens," Miss Blanding said:

Miss Blanding placed intelligence above all other needed capacities. She defined intelligence as the capacity to think, with that capacity developed to think straight.

Spark of Genius

To think is the spark of genius each of us has," Miss Blanding said, "and it is the duty of college professors to fan this spark and to set us thinking straight."

She said that we must be concerned with the kind of people needed to get the world back on an even keel, the type of mind needed to reinforce the democratic system.

To choose the right people to follow is also an ability. We must be critical in our judgment and look to people who have emotional maturity.

Excuses Are Bad

"No aspect is more frightening than the excuses people use when they don't want to do a thing," Miss Blanding stated emphatically.

To be an active participant in a religious group was the last requirement Miss Blanding set up for us to consider "In the Time of Our Lives."

Barbara Sprengle, retiring WSGA president, introduced Miss Blanding, the president of Vassar for the past four years and the recipient of honorary degrees from University of Pennsylvania, Smith college, Syracuse university, University of Kentucky, and Brown university.

Officers Installed

Following Miss Blanding's speech, Miss Sprengle installed the new WSGA officers for next year. She also announced that a tea for Miss Blanding would be held immediately following the convocation giving the girls an opportunity to talk to her personally. The tea was held in Simmons lounge.

Engineering Honorary Holds Banquet Tonight

Eta Kappa Nu, electrical engineering honorary, will hold a banquet tonight at the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity house at 7:30 o'clock, president Harry Schaffer announced yesterday.

Bill Jeffrey, head soccer coach, will be the main speaker of the program. There will be an initiation service at the Electrical Engineering building at 6 o'clock immediately preceding the banquet.

GSA Awards Two Work Bids

The General State authority yesterday awarded two bids totaling $1,676,597 for construction at the College.

The bids included an addition to Recreation hall, with contracts calling for $1,021,310, and the construction of dairy barns at a cost of $655,287.

General construction bids were first received April 11 after the revision of plans on the Recreation hall addition. The structure was reduced 21 feet, and fire-proofing of structural steel was omitted. Wood partitions replaced proposed metal ones.

Other bids were taken Feb. 14. The cost of heating and plumbing work was lowered by the reductions.

Contracts awarded for Recreation hall are general construction, Baton Construction Corporation, Philadelphia, $744,000; heating, Riggs, Distler and company, Philadelphia, $92,900; plumbing, Philadelphia Mechanical Constructors, Inc., $91,535; electrical, Riggs, Distler and company, Inc., $92,875.

Contracts for the dairy barns are general construction, Matthew L. Carroll, New York, $503,500; heating, Francis J. Gannon, Hamburg, $22,987; plumbing, Riggs, Distler, and company, $70,900; electrical, Carter Electrical Construction, Pittsburgh, $57,900.

Cwens To Hold Spring Picnic

This year's group of Cwens will hold a picnic Saturday, April 28, for last year's members. The picnic, which is to be held at Greenwood Furnace, will last from 12:15 till 5 p.m.

Chairman of the affair is Marlene Heyman. Committee members are Rita Keeney, Mary Ann Wertman, Lil Cassover, and Peggy Shultz.

The old and new Cwens are going to compete in a baseball game, and following that, have regular picnic style food.

100 Airmen Arrive

One hundred more airmen arrived at the College yesterday from Lackland Air base, San Antonio, Texas.

The group, which brings the total on campus to 450, traveled from Texas to Pittsburgh by plane and from there to State College by bus.

They will go into training as clerk-typists.
