

Reds Retreat Along Wide Korean Front

TOKYO, Friday, April 20—(P)—Chinese and North Korean Reds retreated slowly Thursday on much of the Korean front under a blanket of rain, smoke and haze.

United Nations forces made limited gains and sent aggressive patrols stabbing northward at many points.

Rain and clouds held Fifth Air Force fighters to only 20 sorties by dusk Thursday. It was the lowest number since Feb. 9, when only seven were mounted.

From West to East, this was the picture:
 West—South Korean troops knifed west and northwest of the Imjin river with little contact.

West central—Allied tank-infantry teams plunged northwest of Yonhon, fingering the way for the advance on Chorwon, a key road and rail point 18 miles north of the 38th parallel.

Central—Allied patrols north of Hwachon withdrew under Red smallarms fire, but other U.N. patrols pushed above the west branch of the Pukhan river with only minor enemy contact.

East-central—The Reds were tougher, sending an 8-man patrol back into the outskirts of allied-held Yanggu, on the western tip of the Hwachon reservoir, and dropping mortar shells into the town. South Koreans drove through North Korean rifle and machine gun fire in a northward advance above Inje, also on the east-central front.

Extreme east—South Korean-manned front quiet.

Ridgeway Speaks To New Troops

SENDAI, Japan, April 19 (P)—A grave, intense Lt. Gen. Matthew B. Ridgeway told new American occupation troops today, "to all intents and purposes, you're here in war."

"We stand under the imminent threat of war which can be unleashed at the time and place of choosing of other people."

The new United Nations and occupation commander made a flying trip to this base 200 miles north of Tokyo to see the newly arrived 40th Division from California.

He spoke at a parade of the 223rd Infantry Regiment, a part of the 40th Division, at Camp Schemmelpfenning, then flew back to Tokyo tonight.

The 40th division is the first occupation force in this area since the Seventh Division went to Korea last August.

Earle Johnson, assistant secretary of the Army, who made the trip with Ridgeway, also spoke.

Dairy Breeding Lab Praised

Dr. Edward Sorenson, of Denmark, recently said there is nothing in all Europe's research facilities to compare with the Dairy Breeding Research laboratory at the College.

A professor of anatomy at the Royal Veterinary and Agricultural college at Copenhagen, Dr. Sorenson spent a week of a three-month tour in this country on the College campus. He is in this country under the technical assistance program of the Economic Co-operation administration.

Dr. John O. Almqvist, associate professor of dairy husbandry at the College, and head of the breeding research center, said he was pleased with the compliments of the Danish scientist.

Pa. May Draft Call Cut To 1872 Men

HARRISBURG, April 19 (P)—Pennsylvania's May draft call was reduced today from 4,243 to 1,872 men.

State Selective Service headquarters said the cut was in line with a May reduction from 60,000 to 40,000 in the national quota for May announced yesterday by the Army.

MacArthur To Receive N. Y. Parade Welcome

NEW YORK, April 19 (P)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the tired, touring war hero landed in New York City tonight and said "when we've reached the city of New York, we know we've come home."

A noisy, colorful 15-mile-long ticker tape parade—a specialty of the big town—gets underway at 11 a.m. (EST) Friday.

It was the first time he has been in New York in 14 years, years that made MacArthur a living legend in the war-torn Pacific area. His plane landed at 9:16 p.m. (EST).

A 17-gun salute, a 65-man color guard, and a 50-piece Army band welcomed the General as he stepped from his Constellation at 9:25 p.m.

His flight from Washington took less than an hour.

MacArthur talked with Mayor Vincent Impellitteri and official greeter Grover Whalen, and all three men laughed heartily.

The five-star General's big day comes tomorrow, which is "MacArthur Day" for all New York.

City officials said perhaps 5,000,000 spectators will look on as MacArthur's motor cavalcade snakes up and down Manhattan island, while skyscraper walls echo the roar of the multitude. That would be the biggest crowd ever for New York, and probably anywhere else.

As a spectacle, the parade is expected to top the historic welcomes for Charles A. Lindbergh in 1927 and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1945.

There were about 4,000,000 spectators on each of those occasions.

Moreover, this is the first big welcome on the television era. As many as 30,000,000 Americans in city and hamlet may watch the parade and the other ceremonies.

U.S. Faces Manpower Shortage

CLEVELAND, April 19 (P)—The U.S. Armed Forces will have trouble filling their manpower needs within 18 months, Maj. Gen. Lewis E. Hershey said today.

The Selective Service chief was in Cleveland to address a meeting of the National Petroleum association.

Although at present draft calls have been lowered, Hershey told a reporter, there will be a military manpower pinch because:

1. Babies born during the depression, when the birth rate fell off, now are reaching the eligible age of 19.
2. Some reservists are scheduled for release in September.
3. More demands for occupational deferments are expected.

Election Victors Will Attend Gov't Confab

By HERB STEIN and JIM GROMILLER

A delegation of the newly-elected All-College cabinet officers, and senior and junior class presidents will attend a student government convention next week, cabinet decided last night.

Motions to appropriate $90 for meals and other expenses and $55 for transportation were passed unanimously.

The convention will be in the form of a clinic to study various student government problems. It will take place at Muhlenberg college April 28 and 29, and will be sponsored by the Pennsylvania region of the National Student association.

Kondourajian To Speak
 Edward Shanken, re-elected as Liberal Arts student council president, will accompany the delegation as a representative of all school councils. Addition of Shanken was made on a motion by Robert Sharets, of the Chemistry and Physics council.

William Klisanin, NSA chairman, reporting on the convention, announced that Harry Kondourajian, All-College vice-president, would speak at the convention as a student government leader.

A report to combine the student Government handbook, the All-College constitution, the Penn State Christian association handbook, and the Undergraduate Regulations pamphlet into one book was presented by Owen Landon. The report was accepted unanimously.

Landon, chairman of a cabinet committee studying the combined book, said that it would cost approximately $1500. Florenz Fenton will be editor and Robert Ley-burn will be business manager.

Students to be presented achievement awards in special ceremonies on Honors day, May 2, have been selected, David Mutchler, awards committee chairman reported. Mutchler suggested that faculty awards not be made this year since the committee had not had time to make a sufficiently complete survey of potential faculty members who could be honored.

3 History Profs Attend Convention

Three professors from the Department of History are attending the Mississippi Valley Historical association convention in Cincinnati, Ohio tomorrow, Friday, and Saturday.

Dr. Philip Klein, Professor Robert Murray, and Professor J. Richardson Usher left Wednesday to attend this annual meeting of the association. This is the first time the College has been represented at the convention.

The historians connected with the association are mainly interested in American history rather than world history.

Kimbrough Pleads For Understanding

By MOYLAN MILLS

Emily Kimbrough, chic and sophisticated in a dark-green off-the-shoulder gown, last night alternately panicked and enthralled her Community forum audience with humorous biographical anecdotes and a fervent plea for better understanding between the United States and foreign nations.

Coming unexpectedly toward the end of Miss Kimbrough's lecture, after she had regaled the audience with stories of her unusual mishaps and inept remarks, the plea was tied in with a recent visit to Europe.

Miss Kimbrough and Cornelia Otis Skinner were repeating their trip of "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay" fame, this time accompanied by their children. Seeing the trouble which the children had in communicating with the French, even though they had studied the language for 14 years, Miss Kimbrough said she gave serious thought to the problem.

She told of the desperate need for young Americans in Europe who can speak and understand a foreign language. Many foreigners come half-way to meet Americans by being able to speak our language, Miss Kimbrough said.

She spoke of the time she met Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and asked her how she was so successful in dealing with foreigners. Mrs. Roosevelt replied that she could speak their language.

Miss Kimbrough said there is a need in the world today for greater understanding between peoples. If Americans could get rid of their "smug arrogance and provincial ignorance" and realized that they must meet foreigners on their own ground, this understanding might be increased, Miss Kimbrough said.

Four To Attend Novice Debate

Four members of the College men's debate team will leave this afternoon for Duquesne university to participate in the Duquesne Novice tournament to be held tomorrow.

Gifford Phillips and John Matase will debate the affirmative and Jay Headley and Edward Shanken will debate the negative of the national intercollegiate debate question, "Resolved: That the non-Communist nations should form a new international organization."

The four men are newcomers to the College team this year. Most Eastern colleges will send novice teams to the tournament.

A tournament champion will be chosen after each team has participated in four rounds of debate.
