

2nd Hearing Needed In Charter Revision

Judge Ivan Walker of Bellefonte ruled yesterday that a second hearing on the proposed amendment to the College charter would be necessary because of the large amount of evidence submitted. The evidence will be put into briefs and weighed by the judge to determine essential information.

The amendment was approved by a 13 to 9 vote at the Jan. 22 meeting of the Board of Trustees. It calls for equal (12-man) representation of agriculture and industry on the board.

Indications are that the second hearing will not be held for several weeks and that the decision will come a number of weeks after that.

Williams Testifies

The present ruling in the charter calls for 12 men "representing both agriculture and industry."

J. Lewis Williams, an alumnus of the College, testifying on behalf of the agricultural factions, said the amendment would create definite opposing groups and it would "lessen the interest in these elections and become matter-of-fact and undemocratic."

Williams said that in the School of Agriculture men are trained in such a way as to enable them to find jobs in industry and "very few return to the farm."

Williams has no official position on the Board of Trustees, but was endorsed by agricultural societies to represent them at the hearing. Nine others were prepared to testify with Williams, but Judge Walker asked for as brief testimony as possible.

Adrian O. Morse, College provost and assistant secretary of the Board of Trustees, testified on behalf of the College.

Provost Says

Morse said that until 1942 the representation of the two factions had been nearly equal, but since that time agriculture has maintained a majority. He cited the year of 1943 when industry had "only one or two members."

Morse said that only four of the 11 members this year are mechanic arts men. William Tiffany, the 12th member, who died recently, was an agricultural society representative.

Festivities Planned For Week-end

Final preparations are being made for the Mother's Day festivities, including the traditional May Day festival, which will take place tomorrow at 3:30 p.m. in front of Old Main.

The College is expected to be in full bloom for visiting parents this weekend.

Walter W. Trainer, supervisor of landscape construction, said that crabapple blossoms will be at their peak, and lilacs should be in full bloom, as well as pink and white dogwood blossoms. Even though the cherry blossoms are fading, some may remain unless rainy weather damages them.

Coronation Ball Tonight

The festivities will begin tonight at 9 with the Coronation Ball in White Hall.

The Schools of Chemistry and Physics, Engineering, Home Economics, and Physical Education, along with all of the residence halls and fraternities, will hold open houses tomorrow for visitors. West Dorms will also be open to visitors from 1 to 6 p.m.

Parents will be entertained at teas from 2 to 3 p.m. tomorrow in lounges of the women's residence halls.

Following these teas, the May Day ceremonies will get underway. This event will be a scenic one, as Martha Baltzell becomes the new May Queen.

Olympic Track Meet

Athletic events for the afternoon include an all-Penn State Olympic track meet at 1 p.m. Freshmen, varsity, and alumni will participate in this event, which is the first of its kind on the campus. The College tennis team will meet Syracuse University at 2.

Visitors will be able to view the fine arts exhibits in the Pattee Library, and Temporary Union Building. The Pennsylvania State Dairy exposition will be in the barns.

Other events tomorrow include the Players productions "John Bull's Other Island" at 8 p.m. at Center Stage, and "Lady in the Dark" at 8 p.m. in Schwab Auditorium. The Modern Dance Recital is at 8 p.m. in White Hall.

Concluding the Mother's Day activities will be the College Symphony Orchestra's annual Mother's Day concert, which will take place in Schwab Auditorium at 3 p.m. Sunday. The program is directed by Theodore Karhan, assistant professor of music at the College; Barbara Thomas, and Lillian Lohrwill.

Parade To Start Dairy Exposition

The Penn State Dairy Exposition will hold a parade at 6:30 tonight in conjunction with the 26th annual Dairy Exposition, which will be held tomorrow, Charles Rightmire, publicity chairman, announced yesterday.

The parade will contain a float on which dairy queen Jean Smucker will ride, a jazz combo, and other vehicles.

Tomorrow's program will consist of a fitting and showing contest, an ice cream molding contest, and a milking contest between the coeds and professors' wives.

Seventy-two purebred dairy cattle will be paraded through the stock pavilion starting at 8:30 a.m.

Miss Smucker, dairy queen, will preside over the affair and award ribbons to the winners at the Saturday night banquet. She is a home economics senior from Huntingdon.

The ice cream molding contest will be judged on the texture, beauty, and composition of the mold. Some of the molds made in other dairy shows include Old Main, the Nittany Lion, and a rooster.

Always a highlight, the professors' wives-coed milking contest will be held in the afternoon.

This show is dedicated to Prof. Robert H. Olmstead, Director of Dairy Extension, for his outstanding work in the Dairy department.

The banquet will be held tomorrow at 7 p.m. at the Lutheran Student Center. Awards, trophies, and prizes will be awarded at that time.

Briggs Visits Wesley Group

Miss Margaret Briggs, field secretary of the Methodist Board of Missions, will visit the Wesley Foundation today, tomorrow and Sunday to speak with any students interested in mission work.

Tonight Miss Briggs will be guest of honor at the annual Kappa Phi banquet at the State College Hotel.

Miss Briggs will interview students at the Wesley Foundation all day tomorrow and speak to one of the foundation's student classes Sunday morning. She will be introduced during the regular church service Sunday at 10:45 a.m. At that time all students planning full-time Christian service will be recognized.

Miss Briggs will interview students again Sunday afternoon and will speak to the Wesley Foundation group Sunday night.

Miss Briggs has participated in Methodist summer caravans in Belgium and North Africa and has taught in a mission school in North Africa for two years.

Decorated Cars To Be In Parade

All groups sponsoring booths in the Spring Carnival will be permitted to enter decorated cars in the Miss Penn State parade to precede the coronation program Tuesday night in Schwab Auditorium.

The various groups may use this means to publicize their entries in the carnival, David Schmuckler, of the Spring Week committee, explained yesterday.

The parade will form on Ag-Hill near the College barns at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday night and will start at 7 p.m.

The College was chartered as the Farmers' High School in 1855. It became the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania on May 1, 1862, and the Pennsylvania State College in 1874.

Mad Hatters Day Brings Wild Hats

Mad Hatter's day, the surprise of Spring Week last year, will bring its unusual chapeau to campus for the second time Wednesday.

Mrs. Milton S. Eisenhower, Mrs. Wilmer Kenworthy, and Lois Nelson, instructor in Clothing and Textiles, will judge the finalists in front of Old Main at 2 p.m. Wednesday.

Cash prizes of $10, $5, and $3 will be awarded for: 1. the cleverest hat; 2. the funniest hat; and 3. the hat best depicting the motif of Spring Week.

Hat wearers must pass in front of Old Main sometime between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. where students will perform the preliminary judging.

Persons wearing hats considered to be outstanding by the judges will be given tags, entitling them to return for the final judging at 2 p.m.

In case of rain, the judging will be held in Old Main near the Student Union desk during the scheduled hours.

Both men and women are eligible for the contest. The hats worn may be either bought or made.

Samuel Vaughan, in charge of the program, urged all students to take part in the contest. He said that a custom hat featuring lilacs with a large hornet flying through them has been received from a leading hat manufacturer and will be on display in a State College store window as an idea for student designers.

Perry Posocco, Warren Cooper, and Marilyn Williams won the cash awards from among 22 entries for their wild hat designs during last year's Spring Week.

Penn State Engineer On Sale Tomorrow

The May issue of the Penn State Engineer will go on sale tomorrow afternoon in the lobby of Electrical Engineering.

The sale will be in connection with the Engineering open house scheduled for tomorrow. The regular stand at the Corner Room will open Monday at 8 a.m.
