

Amendment Bill To Go To House

The proposed amendments to the Senate-approved state loyalty oath bill will come before the House sometime this week. The changes would make the bill similar to that of the federal government.

The changes, which were proposed by the House State Government Committee after hearing presidents of colleges and universities throughout the state, include:

Students Give One Act Play

Three State College High School pupils will appear in today's Five O'Clock Theatre presentation, augmenting the regular cast of students at the College.

The high school pupils are Beverly Corl, Sue Shaffer, and Sheldon Odland. Other members of the cast are Fran Stridinger and Bob Kritt.

This week's presentation will be "Too Many Boy Friends," an original one-act play by Dick Andersen, graduate student in dramatics.

Herb Arnold is director and Wes Pirman technical director.

Five O'Clock Theatre productions are held each Tuesday at 5 p.m. in the Little Theatre, 11 Old Main. Script-in-hand presentation of student-written plays are usually given, although occasionally other experimental dramatic work is presented.

Brenner Receives Gavel For Speech

Marlin Brenner, manager of the men's debate team, took first place in the inter-squad address reading contest Wednesday night. Brenner won a gavel for his interpretation of "Morality Has Become Legality," a speech first delivered by Sen. William Fulbright in April, 1950.

Ruiner-up Edwin Lefkowitz was awarded a silver gavel. He read portions of "Freedom and Authority," an address by Dr. Josef Korvel.

The entire men's debate squad participated in the eliminations, from which six finalists were chosen. They included Robert Alderdice, John Harris, David Schmuckler, Donald Yenko, Brenner and Lefkowitz.

The contest was judged by Prof. J. F. O'Brien, Asst. Prof. W. W. Hamilton, E. R. Gilkey, E. V. Hildebrandt, T. A. Hopkins, and H. J. O'Brien, all of the speech department.

Naval Research Unit To Present Program

The demonstration unit of the Office of Naval Research Special Devices Center will present a program tonight at 7:30 in 10 Sparks, Lt. R. F. Marboe, commanding officer of the Volunteer Naval Research Unit 4-4, State College, has announced.

Members of VNRU 4-4, faculty members of the School of Education, staff and midshipmen of the NROTC Unit, Composite Unit 4-3, Electronic Platoon 4-3 and other Naval reservists may attend, he said.

Chess Club Tourny Goes Into Final Round

The All-College chess tournament, sponsored by the Penn State Chess Club, will go into the second and final round of play today.

All students entered in the tournament must have completed at least three matches if they wish to remain eligible for further competition, announced Jerome Movsovich, club president.

SAUER TO SPEAK

Dr. John A. Sauer, professor and head of the Department of Mechanical Engineering, will speak on "Some Applications of Statistical Mechanics" at 3 p.m. today in 102 Engineering A.

L. G. Balfour, national interfraternity conference president, named Penn State, along with Cornell and Bowdoin, as the three best fraternity campuses in America at Penn State's annual Interfraternity banquet May 9, 1940.

Festivities Continued Despite Rain

Despite adverse weather conditions, thousands of people arrived on campus Friday and Saturday to witness the combined May Day and Mother's Day festivities.

The coronation, which was originally scheduled for the Old Main lawn, had to be moved to Recreation Hall because of the rainy weather. Only once before, in 1948, were the ceremonies held in Recreation Hall because of bad weather conditions.

Over 3,500 visitors and students filled the building to capacity as Martha Baltzell became the new May Queen.

Among the visitors attending the weekend festivities, was Mrs. A. R. Geiger, formerly Mildred Ride, who was May Queen in 1922. Mrs. Geiger is the mother of Jean Geiger, a freshman at the College.

Traffic for the weekend was very heavy as was evidenced by the full time work of the campus patrol. Many people had to travel out of State College for their meals because of the long waiting lines.

It was reported by the Dean of Women's office that there were hundreds of visitors who had to stay as far as 40 miles from the campus because of the crowds which had made advance reservations.

Even though the weather was bad on Saturday, parents and friends did get an opportunity to see the campus in full bloom on Sunday as the mercury went up as high as 80 degrees.

Voting At Hillel Closes Tonight

Voting for the 1951-52 officers of the Hillel Foundation closes at 7 tonight, Ralph Cash, Hillel president, announced yesterday. Candidates include Sanford Hertz and Michael Krap, president; Stanley Goldman and Solomon Jaffe, men's vice-president; Lillian Cassover and Sallissa Citrenbaum, women's vice-president; Miriam Bleiber, Rosalyn Gross and Doreen Jackson, secretary; and Frances Dektor and Julian Gordon, treasurer.

In addition to the executive committee elections, 12 students will be elected to the governing board as members-at-large.

Home Ec Professor Attends Conference

Marion S. McDowell, associate professor of family relations at the College, recently attended the Groves Conferences on marriage held at Chapel Hill, North Carolina. The conference was attended by teachers, marriage counselors, and public health and social workers.

Assistant In Sociology Author Of Bibliography

John A. Hostetler, graduate assistant in rural sociology at the College, is author of a bibliography on the Amish.

The book, "An Annotated Bibliography of Source Materials Pertaining to the Old Order Amish Mennonites," was published recently by the Mennonite Publishing House, Scottsdale, Pa. Hostetler, a student of Amish life and history and rural sociology, stems directly from the Old Order Amish.

Women's IM Talk Contest Starts At 7

The Women's Intramural Discussion Contest will be held at 7 tonight and tomorrow in 2 Sparks.

Women may still register with Lois Pulver in 22 Simmons hall for the contest.

All women except members of the debate squad and Delta Alpha Delta, women's professional speech society, are eligible to enter.

Entrants must be sponsored by a campus organization, sorority, or dormitory living unit. The groups may enter as many representatives as they wish.

A gold cup will be presented to the group whose representative presents the most effective argument for or against the question, "In the advent of all-out war, should women be drafted?"

The contestants will be divided into two groups, and will speak for a total of six minutes in round-table style. The six minutes may be divided into two or three minute periods if the speaker chooses. Two finalists will be picked from each group to go into the final round tomorrow night.

Contestants need not spend time on extensive research and preparation, for the purpose of the discussion is to hear opinions concerning the drafting of women.

Lois Pulver and Shirley Gallagher will be chairmen of the discussion groups. Members of the debate squad and Delta Alpha Delta will judge the preliminaries tonight, and faculty members will judge the finals tomorrow night.

The discussion is open to the public, according to Esther Beck, chairman. Last year's winner was Gay Brunner.

Froth Brings Spring Things In Last Issue

See Editorial on Page Four

Spring has truly arrived at Penn State in the form of budding trees, Spring Weekend, and Froth's Equinox issue.

The odor of spring is especially apparent in the story of Ag Hill, though poor Joe College of "The Common Code" is blissfully unaware of its breezy freshness.

Baby Jeffrey took Froth's motto, "Old soldiers never die," to heart, and makes his last appearance in this issue. So too, do we have our farewell glimpse of the departing staff which has made this magazine what it is for the past year.

Uncle Sam, vice, and women, are still the main topics of discussion, however, and are featured in "Greetings!" "The Sixty-Ninth Bottle," "The Rites of Spring," and the Froth Girl of the Month.

The humor section is enlivened by Lyn Levitt's "Of Moose and Men," the success story of a typical campus male.

And not even the spring issue would be complete without Mug and Jester, Dope Sheet, and Old Mania departments.
