Players Show, 'Light Up The Sky,' Opens Wednesday Night

Fourth of July fireworks will be supplemented by the summer opening of Centre Stage Wednesday night with "Light Up The Sky," a Moss Hart comedy.

The play, first submitted to the public for approval during the '48-'49 season, is a parody on the theatre, or at least what some imagine the theatre to be.

The cast, composed of students, faculty, and local talent will offer the parody-comedy for ten nights as the first of three plays to be presented throughout the summer session.

Joe Bird, as Carleton Fitzgerald; Helen Jaskel, as Stella Livingston; and Joyce Rexford, as Irene Livingston, will fill the lead roles.

The play is set in Boston, with three acts depicting the personalities of a theatrical group before and after the opening and after the reviews of the play are printed.

Hart has delighted in the complete change that takes place in his characters during the siege of anxiety about the play.

That the playwright enjoyed the production of the parody is evident from the characters which were said by many to indicate actual persons in show business.

At the time of its opening performances, many saw Billy Rose and Eleanor Holm in the characters of Sidney and Frances Black, played by Harold Fishbein and Francine Toll. Miss Toll plays a famous ice skater.

George Miller is cast as William Gallagher. Franne Dumoff will play Miss Lowell; Jack Tyo will be Owen Turner; Jim Beaver will handle the Peter Sloan part; and Dan Wargo will be Tyler Rayburn.

Bill Dunkel is cast as a Shriner, and Bill Coleman as a Plain-Clothes Man.

Kelly Yeaton is the director for the initial production of the summer season. Warren Smith and W. H. Walters are the co-producers for the entire season.

Centre Stage is an arena type theatre with the seating arranged in a circle around the stage. It is located at Hamilton Ave. and S. Allen Street. Season tickets are available at the theatre.

Fees will then be assessed at Willard Hall and paid at the Bursar's office.

Each student is expected to present a receipted or a validated class card to the instructor before the student is admitted to class. This card will not be required to be filled out at the registration headquarters; however, it must be completed before the first session of class.

Classes will begin tomorrow as scheduled, starting at 8 a.m. Those classes regularly scheduled for today will be held either on Saturday, July 7 or at a time which is satisfactory to the students and instructors concerned.

There will be no classes on Wednesday, July 4, but classes will resume the following day. The holiday on Wednesday will not have to be made up.

4th Draft Test Held Next Thur.

Dr. Hugh M. Davison, professor of educational research at the College who is in charge of the Selective Service College Qualification Tests taken at the College, reported that the College agreed to conduct a fourth test on Thursday, July 12.

It was not yet known how many applicants will be assigned to Penn State for the test. The July 12 date was added for the benefit of men whose religion prohibits them from taking the examinations on a Saturday. The first three testing dates were Saturdays.

Less than 100 students took the Selective Service test at the College Saturday. It was the third to be given here.

The first examination on May 26 enrolled 974 students while 434 reported for the test on June 16.

Prexy Awarded Honorary Degree At Pittsburgh

Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, president of the College, was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of laws by the University of Pittsburgh last month.

Honorary degrees also were conferred upon General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who addressed the graduating class; Dr. Robert L.
