

First Science Session Classes End Friday

Classes will end for some 527 chemists, engineers, and physicists this Friday when the first six-week science session will come to an end. These students have been trying something comparatively new in summer sessions at the College, and some of them will be finishing work for a degree right in the middle of the regular main session.

For a lot of these scientists, however, all it means is a final exam, a two-day holiday, and then registration and a plunge back into the grind again.

Marion R. Trabue is director of the entire summer sessions program.

Registration for the second six weeks science session will take place on Monday morning in Recreation Hall. Students will register from 8 to 12 in the morning.

The new set-up for summer school was announced last March, as an expediency measure for students who wished to finish school before entering the service. Complaints that the three-week periods were not long enough to handle the extensive laboratory work involved in the science courses also were instrumental in bringing about the change.

A considered nine-week period for men and women wishing to enter the College as new freshmen was dropped when insufficient freshmen expressed interest in the idea.

Registration plans for next Monday consist of the usual procedure for going to Rec Hall, procuring a registration envelope if pre-registered, seeing the information desk if not pre-registered, and completing the process in Rec Hall and Willard Hall.

One change from previous registrations has been announced by J. E. Miller, administration assistant to the director of summer sessions. Veterans no longer must report to the armory to complete their registration. Everything has been placed under one roof for everybody registering, with the exception of the fee assessor, located in the ground floor of Willard.

A complete list of instructions to registrants appears on page 8 of this issue.

Korean Ambassador Gives U.S. Warning

Although he touched very briefly on the subject of the current peace talks in Korea, Dr. You Chan Yang, Korean ambassador to the United States sounded a note of warning to the United States last week at the College.

3rd Concert To Be Given

The Bourne Quartet will present the third concert in the Summer Artists Series on Tuesday, July 24 in Schwab Auditorium at 8:30.

Members of the quartet are Gene Cox of Alabama and John Patterson, born in Carthage, Missouri, tenors; Richard Riddell from Denver, Colorado, baritone; and Robert Griffin, from Seattle, Washington, bass.

Pennsylvania-born Earl Weidner is arranger and accompanist for the group.

"I tell you, my American listeners," Dr. You said, "she (Russia) would play that one card against you, with her own slave armies, but for one reason. The Soviet Union is afraid of you. You are number Three on her timetable of world conquest. Asia is Number One, Europe is Number Two. The United States is Number Three."

Dr. You spoke before more than 500 listeners last week at the closing session of the fourth annual Radio and Television Institute at the College. His audience overflowed the seats in 121 Sparks, sitting on the floor and temporary chairs.

Power For Good

The ambassador hailed radio as a power for good, but only as long as the minds and hands that control it are dedicated to goodness and decency and the dignity of man. Dr. You continued to say that "radio, when controlled by evil minds and evil hands, also can be a diabolical power for evil."

Touching on current armistice talks in Korea, Dr. You predicted that "the false radio, no matter what happens in Korea during these negotiations, will tell the world that peace terms were dictated to the defeated United Nations' forces on soil already contaminated by American imperialists—the exact spot from which the forces of traitor Syngman Rhee, aided by John Foster Dulles, launched an imperialistic war of aggression against the peaceful, democratic forces of the world."

Stock Group To Present 'Anna Christie'

O'Neill Prize Play Will Open Tonight

Most theater-goers feel that a season is not complete without a Eugene O'Neill play and the Center Stage stock company will satisfy the local O'Neill fans by presenting "Anna Christie" as its second production of the summer season.

The Pulitzer Prize winning drama will open tonight for a two-week run at the Hamilton street theater-in-the-round.

Jimmy Ambandos is the director of the new summer theater offering, and just to make certain the family is in the spotlight, his wife, Francine Toll is in the lead role of Anna.

College Film

Ambandos, the producer of the film, "This Is Penn State" and a veteran of Town and Nine Players, formerly a local stock company, is well known among students and townspeople. Francine Toll also appeared in "Light Up The Sky" which closed last night.

George Miller, who distinguished himself in a comparatively small part in "Sky", will play Mat Burke, the male lead in tonight's drama.

Miss Toll, Miller, and Joe Bird, who is Chris Christopherson in "Anna Christie", have been rehearsing in the afternoons while playing in "Light Up The Sky" at nights for the past weeks.

"Shady Past"

Tonight's play, set on the Eastern Coast and in Boston, tells of the influence of the sea on the characters, including Anna who finds that a "past" can still offer difficulties to be handled in the future.

Joyce Rexford plays Marthy Owen in the production and Lew Shirley is cast as Johnny—the Priest.

Jay Broad handles the "Larry" role and Bill Dunkel plays the Postman. Carl Wagner and Bill Coleman complete the small cast as two Longshoremen.

Miss Rexford, Coleman and Dunkel all played in the play that ended its run last night.

As a movie, "Anna" drew Greta Garbo and Marie Dressler as its stars, a Pulitzer Prize as a play, and acclaim everywhere as both.
