English Professor Does Introduction To Terror Novel

Dr. Louis F. Peck, associate professor of English composition at the College, has written the introduction to the new edition of "The Monk," an 18th century Gothic novel of terror to be published by Grove Press in the Fall.

Long recognized as an authority on the Gothic tales of terror, Dr. Peck's private collection of old editions of "The Monk" total thirty. Included in his collection is a publisher's uncut copy of the book which was written in 1796.

Dr. Peck at present is working on a biography of the book's author, Mathew G. Lewis. The last biography of Lewis was written in 1829.

Dr. Peck's literary contributions on the tale of terror have appeared in the Philological Quarterly, Modern Language Notes, and the Journal of English and Germanic Philology.

Dr. Forster Talks Before Principals' Conference Mon.

Supervising principals of Pennsylvania public schools were advised Monday night that the school systems should make young Americans aware of the meaning of democracy.

Speaking at the dinner meeting of the 2nd annual conference of Supervising Principals, Dr. Kent Forster, associate professor of history at the College said that "democracy is more than a political organization; it is a way of life."

Dr. Forster told the educators that Americans are "rather inarticulate" in their definitions of democracy and that "before we can explain democracy to others, we ourselves must know what it means."

Three characteristics of democracy, as listed by Dr. Forster, are: it places emphasis on the individual; it recognizes that freedom for the individual for his full development; it is flexible in its application since granting true freedom sometimes means restricting other types of freedom.

"Although a democratic society grants greater freedom than any other society, it also imparts greater responsibilities to keep that freedom," Dr. Foster said.

Dr. Hatcher Named Committee Chairman

Dr. Hazel M. Hatcher, professor of home economics education and home-community relationships at the College, was named chairman of the international committee of the National Home Economics Association at recent meetings held in Cleveland, O.

The committee is responsible for the awarding of seven or eight annual scholarships in home economics to foreign students for work in colleges in this country.

Yeagley Named Concert Committee General Chairman

Dr. Henry L. Yeagley, associate professor of physics at the College, has been named general chairman of the campaign committee for the State College Community Concerts. He succeeds Dr. Henry S. Brunner, professor of agricultural education.

In this capacity, Dr. P. R. Matson, president of the Association explained, Dr. Yeagley will head the drive for memberships which will be held during the week of October 8.

Charter members of the Association, who participated in the service during the past season, will have an opportunity to renew their memberships during the week of October 1.

Preliminary plans for the membership campaign were made this week at a meeting of the Community Concert Committee. Artists for the series will be booked at the completion of the campaign.
