

Campus Student Government Headed by All-College Cabinet

All-College Cabinet is the highest student government organization at Penn State.

On cabinet sit representatives of the lesser governing councils and boards along with the individual class presidents and All-College officers.

The three All-College officers—All-College president, All-College vice-president, and All-College secretary-treasurer, are elected in the spring for the following year. Senior and junior class officers, likewise are elected in the spring, while freshmen and sophomores elect officers in the fall.

The All-College president presides over cabinet meetings, appoints student committees, and in general is the leader of student government on campus.

Chairs Finance Group
The All-College secretary-treasurer, besides directing the financial affairs of cabinet, also is chairman of the interclass finance committee. Treasurers of each of the four classes also occupy seats on the finance committee.

It has been the boast of student government at Penn State that each student is represented at least four times on cabinet. He is represented by the president of his class, the president of his school council, the chairman of either the men's or women's athletic associations, the president of either the fraternity or sorority councils, or the independent organizations.

The All-College president, in addition to standing committees, also appoints members of Tribunal, the student judicial board.

The All-College elections committee, also appointed by the All-College president, has the task of running campus elections, counting ballots, and setting up the elections code.

The following students sit on All-College Cabinet by virtue of the offices they hold.

James Worth, All-College president, former member Association of Independent Men, Watts Hall Council, and All-College activities committee. Member of Sigma Chi.

Harry Cover, All-College vice-president, former member Pollock Circle Council, Tribunal, and Blue Key.

Counsellors--

(Continued from page one) counselling, the adviser will also assist in the organization of social programs. There will be one adviser for about every 50 to 75 men.

This is the third year the program has been in effect. It was enlarged last year due to the number of incoming freshmen. Prior to last year, there had been only one adviser for each 175 men.

Frosh Permissions Set By Dean Weston

Freshman women will be granted 9:15 permissions during Orientation Week and sophomores and upperclass women will have 10 o'clock's during the week and 1 o'clock's Friday and Saturday, according to Pearl O. Weston, dean of women.

This week-end freshmen will receive 10 o'clock's, she said.

If orientation programs run later than the closing time at the dormitories, coeds may stay until the completion of the program but must return to the dormitories immediately, Miss Weston said.

Sunday night regular freshman hours will go into effect and customs will begin next Monday morning.

PSC Oldest Independent Men's Group

The Penn State Club, oldest independent men's group, was organized in 1932 as a social and athletic organization for non-fraternity men.

However, today it is primarily a social group. Membership is open to all independent men who receive the group's stamp of approval. Presently, there are better than 100 members in the club.

Sponsor Talent Show

The high point of the year for the club is the All-College Talent Show, which is held in Schwab Auditorium during February. Cash awards are presented to the three top contestants. The winners are decided by audience applause. Last year's winner was Robert Klug, talented freshman pianist from Philadelphia.

The proceeds of the Talent Show are used for picnics, semi-formal dances, hayrides, and mixed parties.

Mixers are held with the various women's dormitories. One of these, the mixer with Atherton Hall, is an annual affair.

A semi-formal dance, usually given in May at the University Club, highlights the social year.

Name Top Senior

At the end of the year, a plaque is presented to the outstanding independent senior. A committee consisting of H. K. Wilson, dean of men; George Donovan, director of Associated Student Activities; and the president of Interfraternity Council decides the recipients. Last year's winner was Robert Davis, 1950-51 All-College president.

Politics are On College, Class Level

Student politics at Penn State are organized on the class level as well as the All-College level.

The two party system prevails, and both State and Lion parties nominate candidates to individual class and All-College offices.

Internal party policies are formulated by party cliques.

Elections for freshman and sophomore offices are annually held in the fall. These are preceded by clique calls by each party. At these meetings clique officers are elected and nominations made for the class officers. Voting in the cliques is restricted to students holding clique membership cards, issued after the student attends two clique meetings.

To Elect Clique Officers

Both parties will elect freshman and sophomore clique presidents, vice-presidents, and secretary-treasurers prior to the fall class elections.

In addition to the elected clique officers, the entire machine swings into the campaign, but the frosh and sops are depended upon to do the bulk of the work. Campaign managers and publicity men are appointed by the new clique officers. As election nears the party nominees make daily visits to campus and fraternity dining rooms to speak to the voters.

The State party recovered last spring from severe defeats the two previous spring elections to sweep its entire slate into office.

In 1949 the Lion party filled every office only to have the State party sweep all six offices in the freshman and sophomore elections in the fall.

Swept '50 Elections

The Lion party swept its second consecutive spring election when it captured the six class (continued on page seventeen)

Two Curricula Added in Ag

Two four-year curricula in the School of Agriculture have been added to the College program, President Milton S. Eisenhower has announced.

The curricula, which bring the total number offered by the College to 59, are agricultural journalism and general agriculture.

Dr. Russell B. Dickerson, vice-dean in charge of resident instruction in the School of Agriculture, explains that the curriculum in agricultural journalism will prepare students desiring to enter the field of farm publications and agricultural extension.

The curriculum in general agriculture is intended for the student who desires a less specialized four-year program than that offered by the present curricula in the school. The curriculum includes basic work in practically all phases of agriculture as well as electives in other fields.

According to College policy, rights on patents of staff members are assigned to the Pennsylvania Research Corporation. Income is used to further research at the College.

"The Place to Go for the Name Brands You Know"

Hello and welcome to all of you... the frosh, transfer student, graduate student, faculty and to you who are returning for another year with us.

For many of you it is a new home away from home. You will be making new friends and acquaintances. Not only will this be true on the campus but also, at your preferred place of worship, the beauty shop, the barber shop, the soda fountain, the restaurant, the clothing store, in fact this will be true throughout the entire community. Just like home back home.

The Commerce Club wants to assist you in any way possible. Come to our office 108 West College Avenue and meet Gene Fulmer our Executive Secretary. Gene graduated from the College in 1948. He would be pleased to assist you with any question or problem that you may have. No question is too small or too large. If we don't know the answer or solution, we know where to find it or it is not to be found. Good Luck.
