Cabinet Open To Student Voices

All-College Cabinet, highest student government legislative body, will meet for the first time at 8 tonight in 201 Old Main.

With 24 members sitting on cabinet, every member of the student body is represented at least four times. There is no chance that any student will fail to find a voice on cabinet.

Cabinet is, however, always open to all students. The meeting room is small, but should there ever be a need for more spectator space, we feel sure meetings would be held in larger quarters.

Not only are students always welcome at cabinet meetings, but they are also free to speak up and express their opinions at any time, on any issue. The only thing students cannot do at the meetings is vote. This responsibility is left to the members.

But good student government is not the responsibility of the members of cabinet alone. Good student government is the responsibility of every student on this campus.

This responsibility includes questioning candidates for office, voting in elections, supporting student government functions, and taking an interest in the affairs of the governing bodies themselves.

Student government does not include only All-College Cabinet, Intfraternity Council, the Association of Independent Men, the West Dorm Council, the living unit councils—these are all part of Penn State student government.

Each of them merits the interest of students, for combined their voice is loud, strong—and effective.

Parking Problems

Acute in recent years, the lack of parking space on campus seems on the verge of collapsing into a desperate state this year. We don't have any idea of the exact figures, but it seems as if there are more cars than ever before on campus this semester.

Parking space is at a premium, despite additional parking areas.

At the same time, however, that additional parking space has been provided, the two-way driving scheme now in operation on Pollock and Shortlidge roads has eliminated space for possibly 200 vehicles, if not more.

Students and others not authorized on campus with cars can help the situation by leaving their automobiles at home. But even full cooperation by unauthorized drivers would leave many without parking space.

Two-way driving on Pollock and Shortlidge roads has already proved unworkable for week-ends. The elimination of the scheme would also make additional parking space available.

Both these factors should be weighed in any study of Penn State's traffic problem.

Have You?

If you are not an undergraduate, have not purchased a subscription, or are not on the complimentary mailing list, you should not be reading this copy of the Daily Collegian.

The Daily Collegian is a student publication. We are supported by a student fee of $1.10 per semester.

Faculty and staff members, graduate students, and secretaries do not contribute to the support of the Daily Collegian. They do not pay any fees. They are not entitled to pick up the Daily Collegian at the Student Union desk or any place else.

When a non-student, except those otherwise entitled, picks up a copy of the Daily Collegian he is depriving a student of something for which he has shelled out hard cash. Such persons are no better than pickpockets or those who pick up a paper at a newsstand and fail to pay for it.

Under a plan introduced this semester, faculty and staff members, graduate students, and secretaries can have the Daily Collegian delivered to their offices for only $3.75 a year.

Don't cheat the students; buy a subscription.

The Time is Short

welcomed the support of an Allen Zoll, boss of an outfit called "America Patriots, Inc., cited by the government for being fascist and subversive, a man cited by the House committee on un-American activities as a "very strong anti-semitic," a man whom the American Legion in 1948 cited for "a long record of activity in connection with . . . dubious outfits of a fascist or near fascist character . . ."

The purpose of this piece of legislation becomes only too clear.

So the time is really short for the people of Pennsylvania.

The time is short, for the passage of the loyalty bill will sound the death knoll for freedom as we in Pennsylvania have known it.

We oppose the loyalty bill because it will destroy the American tradition of free inquiry and free expression of ideas without fear of reprisal and intimidation.

We oppose the loyalty bill because it would limit the pursuance of truth in our institutions of higher learning.

We oppose the loyalty bill because it contributes to the momentum of the hysterical landslide of fear that is sweeping the nation.

We oppose the loyalty bill not because we have any sympathy with the Communists or their cause, but rather because such legislation plays into the hands of the Communists in their efforts to undermine our democratic system.

We oppose the loyalty bill because it comes at a time when we should be broadcasting our freedoms to the world rather than advertising our fears to people who seek leadership, vision, and faith in the democratic method, and not panic.

We Do Not Have Proper Athletic Representation

TO THE EDITOR: Tuesday morning in "the Lion's Lair" (the Collegian) sports editor, so aptly once more pointed out to our student body the fine calibre of Penn State leadership, through its athletic program, in comparison to other educational institutions in this field. Undoubtedly corruptness has once more shown its face. We are told that State's sports program is much closer to the student body than in most schools, especially in basketball which has received the brunt of sports' most recent scandals.

I am in complete agreement with the writer on this point and also on the statement that NSA's declaration and action on the subject taken at the fourth National Student Congress are sound. However, the agreement does not apply in all points mentioned concerning Penn State.

On one point I must disagree and bring to the attention of the student body that we are not fairly represented on our Athletic Board. Supervision, and promotion of the vast Penn State intercollegiate program is not handled by the Athletic Association, who's officers are elected by the male students, but by the Athletic Advisory Board. Student representation on this 15-man board is held to three students, the All-College president, the Athletic Association president and the Chairman of the Board of Publications. Since each student pays $9.00 a semester, is three of 15 decent representation? Is it even a fair representation?

Now is a good time for a change, let's make one!

Seniors, Warning!

TO THE EDITOR: This letter is written to inform and warn any reader who may be interested in securing a Penn State class ring.

Last October I ordered a class ring which was not delivered until April. The ring was only a feeble imitation of a Penn State class ring, termed "official" in the advertisement which a jeweler mailed to various unsuspecting students during the fall months. Truly, the ring was of inferior quality, considering the price paid; yet, the jeweler would not cooperate in correcting the many imperfections of the ring, much less accept its return for a refund. Since there is nothing that can be done legally, I am just "stuck." If I don't like it, it is simply too bad, for that is the way that this firm carries on its business.

Therefore, when any reader receives an advertisement from BANKES BROTHERS JEWELERS of Bloomsburg, Pa., it would be wise to consider carefully before dealing with this aggregation. And investigate before making any purchase from them so you won't be "taken"—as I was!

15 YEARS AGO

Sept. 18, 1936—The students favored Landon to Franklin D. Roosevelt on a straw vote conducted by the Collegian during registration. The results showed Landon received 1.7 votes to everyone received by Roosevelt.

Dean Charles W. Stoddard, head of the School of Liberal Arts, stated that the new method, that of lower division, "has come up to all our hope and dreams."

Football coach, Bob Higgins, pitched his varsity team against the freshman yearlings in a game at New Beaver Field. The varsity string mauled the yearlings.

Little Man On Campus

By Bibler

"Take Meyers for psychology, he lets his classes out early and sometimes doesn't even come. Old Prof Thornton is so old he doesn't take roll in English III. Prof Baker just got married, so he won't be anxious to give outside assignments that he'll have to grade...."

It Says Here

By BUD FENTON

That horrible mass of broken pencils, crumpled forms, and glassy-eyed registrants in Rec Hall last week was tragic, but it provided more jokes and stories of frustration than the wartime Army physical exams.

—Like the girl who put the wrong code number with a course, crossed it out and wrote it correctly on the next line and presented her registration form at the desk, only to be told that corrections could not be made on the form and she would have to drop-add. Five minutes of pleading and explaining that it would mean dropping and adding the same course was to no avail until she started to scream. At this the officials got together and decided that perhaps it would be all right just this once.

A notice from the National Safety Council informs us that the millionth traffic death in the U.S. will occur (according to their statistics) during the coming month of December. Around here the boys are laying 8 to 5 that it will be on Pollock Road if we all don't get used to the new two-way traffic and no parking rules.

A man (or something) from Froth dropped in the other day and borrowed some baby things from the wife. Said that he was going to use them for the next issue. We tried to get the connection between Froth and babies (any kind), but had to give it up. I guess we'll borrow a copy after it comes out if we want to find the link.

(Ed. note: A late communique reports that whatever the link was, it will not be printed, Tsk, tsk, Froth.)

An interesting item was scrapped out of the town paper the other day. The question of Sunday movies will be brought to a vote in the November election. Students can't vote but they could bring pressure to bear on the local merchants, landladies, voting faculty, and other jolly townfolk.

Those who followed the escapades of Baby Jeffrey last year in his role as correspondent for a campus magazine will be interested to know that in spite of his literary abilities he had never learned to walk. A late communique however, from an interested on-looker, described the following scene:

"A short time ago, Jeffrey was seen to have made little progress except in the field of giggling . . . but suddenly, breaking loose from a horde of would-be tacklers, he raced across the kitchen to the far wall, spun around, and swivel-hipped his way back to the living room. The crowd went mad. Both of them stood up and cheered. Jeffrey got scared, fell down, split his lip, and was carried off the field by exuberant well-wishers."
