

Freshmen Confused; Still Ask Questions

By DOT BENNETT

Confused freshmen wandering around campus yesterday, still trying to find their classes, were more anxious to ask questions than to answer them. They wanted to know about everything from how to put through drop-adds to how to get into every activity on campus.

Wilber Slocum, a pre-law student from Middleton, expressed the feelings of many freshmen when he said, "Penn State is in a perpetual state of confusion."

Classes "Awfully Hard"

Lois Freed, York, an arts and letters major, said she liked her classes "so far," but added that it was really too soon to tell, while Betty Buchanan, Philadelphia, art education, said she had been "pleasantly surprised" with all classes and instructors.

Edith Hasson, Berwick, journalism major, thinks her classes are awfully hard, while Maxine Deutsch, Atlantic City, arts and letters, was amazed at the number of people in her classes.

Like Customs

Eric Duckworth, Willow Grove, a future chemical engineer, said he found German and math "rough," but everything else all right, while Frank Ganoe, Cherrytree, an animal husbandry major, said he enjoys all his classes, and added that they were "not exactly rough if you pay attention."

Most of the frosh seem to like customs, although one of them said the hatmen "are everywhere," and added, "When they come to get you, that's bad."

Daniel Jackson, Warren, a commerce and finance major, said customs were as good as he had expected, while Roy Molina, Scranton, a pre-med, said he was "really getting a lot of college spirit." Joanne Slate, Latrobe, liberal arts, said her sign was "getting droopy."

More Food

Jeanette Nitrauer, Stroudsburg, arts and letters, thinks customs would be better if they lasted just one week, although she feels they "help you get to know people."

When asked about Penn State in general, Finnette Barkel, London England, arts and letters, said she would like to have more food in the dining hall and fewer lines and class changes on campus. Gail Green, Winnetka, Ill., home economics, thinks it's all confusing, but fun, except that "it's so far between classes."

Gay, Carefree

Tony Spenato, Poseto, pre-med, doesn't like all the line-standing and schedule-changing, and Cecelia Johns, Wilkes-Barre, liberal arts, thinks the campus is beautiful, but says she needs a new map.

Russell Neff, Meadville, chemical engineering, had come up earlier to "look the place over," and likes it very much.

So it goes with the freshmen—happy, gay, carefree, optimistic—wait 'til mid-term bluebooks come around.

Rushees to Receive At Home Invitation

Sorority rushees may pick up At Home invitations from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. today at the Panhellenic Post Office in the northeast lounge of Atherton Hall.

According to the rushing code, each rushee may attend only three At Homes, which will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday in each sorority suite. The regulations also state that a rushee may not stay in any suite longer than one hour.

Addell Owen, Panhellenic Council rushing chairman, will speak on preferential bidding at a meeting for all rushees at 11 a.m. tomorrow in 121 Sparks. Questions on rushing will also be answered.

Penn Haven Elections

Raymond Judd has been elected president of Penn Haven at a recent meeting.

Other officers are Gary Barns, vice-president; Raymond Wisniewski, secretary; Donald Fiser, treasurer; Peter Vrona, social chairman; John Jelenik, athletic chairman; and Ralph Schorr, publicity chairman.

Engagements

Scout-Linnekin

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Linnekin of Harrisburg announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara, to Vance Scout, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Scout, also of Harrisburg.

Miss Linnekin is a senior in home economics at Drexel Institute of Technology. She is president of her dormitory and of Omicron Nu, home economics honorary.

Mr. Scout is a senior at the College, and plans to graduate in January. He is a member of Sigma Pi.

Stebly-Heidish

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Heidish of New Castle, Pa. announce the engagement of their daughter, Georgia, to Marion Stebly, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Stebly of Euclid, Ohio.

Miss Heidish is a senior in the School of Liberal Arts, and plans to graduate in January. She is a member of Delta Zeta.

Mr. Stebly attended Ohio State University and is a member of Phi Gamma Delta. At present he is stationed with the Air Force on Okinawa.

Yearbook Calls For Candidates

La Vie, senior class yearbook, will begin another year of operation next week with a call for candidates from the present junior class, James Geffert, editor, announced yesterday.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Tuesday in 405 Old Main. All candidates must be fifth semester students and may be enrolled in any of the schools of the College.

Candidates, of which there were about 100 last year, do small jobs in the office and are required to spend one hour a week there.

First promotions come after approximately two months work. Those who do not get promotions to junior editorial board are dropped from the staff. Senior board announcements are made in the spring. Those promoted are staff members for the following year.

Alum's Son Comes Here From Brazil

Many students attend their father's alma maters, but few travel as far as Richard Hamer, son of a Penn State graduate living in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Born in Montevideo, Uruguay, he lived there until he was 12. He then moved to Brazil and attended an English board school in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

He said Argentina now is like Germany was in the 1930's. He and his schoolmates were afraid to say anything against Peron or his wife, even in English. The army took over his school in 1950.

American Citizen

An American citizen, he arrived in New York about a month ago where he was surprised to hear people really saying "boid" and "Joisey." He had always thought that those stories were jokes.

Hamer said he likes the friendliness of people at State College. At his Argentine school, classmates would know each other for two or three years before calling each other by first names. Also in South America, strangers never speak to each other, even in bars. But this week, while wearing his freshman customs, a hatman spoke to him at the counter in the Corner Room.

Food Better

He said the food is much better in the dorms than it was in the boarding school though he

Dance Postponed

Because freshman men's customs cannot be lifted, the dance planned by the Women Student Government Association for Oct. 22 has been indefinitely postponed. Mary Jane Woodrow, WSGA president, said.

Women's customs would have been lifted if the dance had been held, she said.

Bird Will Emcee Players' Shindig

Joe Bird will be master of ceremonies at the annual Players' Shindig to be held at 7 tonight in Schwab Auditorium.

Bird, a veteran campus actor, was seen last year in the Players' productions of "The Time of Your Life," and "Lady in the Dark." He also had the comedy lead in the Thespians' version of Cole Porter's "Anything Goes."

Any new or interested students may attend the affair, which is designed to explain the functions of the campus dramatics organization. Those interested in crew work and technical jobs, as well as acting, will be welcomed.

misses eating dinner at 9 p.m. He prefers the ice cream found in American dumps to that in the best restaurants of Brazil.

A freshman in petroleum and natural gas, he wants to pioneer in the petroleum industry in Brazil.

Hamer said he enjoys customs but is disappointed in the lack of hatmen. He saw more of them during Orientation Week than the first few days of customs.
