As the football season approaches, the Lion Shrine is once again in danger of being painted by bands of over-enthusiastic fans from Penn State's rivals.

Last year, for the first time since the shrine was erected, pledges of Pi Lambda Phi kept it from being painted before a home game with Temple. This year the pledges will again try to thwart plans of any Lion foes by guarding the shrine, in four shifts of three hours each, from 9 p.m. Friday to 8 a.m. Saturday.

Captain Phillip Mark, of the campus patrol, has assured the Pi Lambda Phi's that they will have full cooperation from the patrol in their attempts to protect the Lion.

Alpha Chi Omega and Phi Mu sororities will take coffee to the pledges on guard at 10 and 11 p.m. respectively.

The Lion Shrine, erected in 1941 by the class of 1940, has been subjected to paintings so many times that as a result of these attacks, it was covered with a wax substance to keep the paint from seeping into the pores in the stone. Even this, however, could not stop the maple house paint, with which it was doused last semester from going deep into the stone. This coating caused much experimentation and hard work by the physical plant in attempts to remove it.

Forum Tickets On Sale Today

Season tickets for the 1951 Community Forum, featuring Robert Vogeler, Eric Johnston, Dr. Bernard Iddings Bell, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., and Kurt von Schuschnigg, go on sale today for $3 including tax.

Chimes, junior women's honorary, will set up subscription booths near the women's dining halls today and Monday from 12 noon to 2 p.m. Tickets may also be bought through fraternity representatives, at the Student Union desk in Old Main, and after Sunday from counselors in the men's dormitories.

Chimes will organize a group of representatives for the women's dormitories early next week. This is the second year that students have sold forum tickets.

Dr. Gerald B. Stein, ticket chairman, announced that the sale will continue until Oct. 15. Exchange of these tickets for reserved seats will start Oct. 22 and continue until Nov. 1, when Vogeler will open the program at Schwab Auditorium.

Coaly Society Will Advise Ag Freshmen

The Coaly Society, agriculture activities society, will initiate a big brother program for freshmen in the agriculture curriculum this fall.

The society will counsel Ag freshmen on matters which are too personal or not important enough to be taken up with their advisers, Wally Butz, president, said yesterday.

However, Butz stressed, the society will not act as advisers in matters pertaining to scheduling, changing courses, or academic studies.

Each big brother will be assigned approximately 30 freshmen.

Representatives from the society will meet with the freshman Ag 1 class at 4 p.m. Monday to explain the work of the society and answer all questions concerning its functioning.

Butz will handle the agricultural education department, Thomas Jurchak, bacteriology; David Stabler, agronomy; Richard Witmer, agricultural engineering; Robert Ralston, dairy husbandry; James Gallagher, animal husbandry; John Kalafus, horticulture; Lester Burdette, pre-vet; William Nichol, agricultural economics and poultry husbandry; and Timoleon Rodriguez, botany, zoology, entomology, and agricultural biochemistry.

Conference Group Discusses Activities

The executive committee of the Intercollegiate Conference on Government Monday discussed plans to make a survey of proposals for the coming year's activities.

The major event of the year's activities will be held in Harrisburg next spring. There the local chapters of the club will stage a mock national presidential nominating convention. The event is planned for mid-April.

The local chapter of the ICG is sponsored by the Political Science department. The purpose of the club is to teach students the operation of government.

The officers are William Klisanin, president; George Reese, vice president; Edward Gilday, secretary; and Edward Chesla, treasurer.

Fouled-Up Freshman Finds Femininity Fun

By MILLIE MARTIN

Advice to freshmen—"If you want to have fun, break customs and get dolled up as a girl." That's a tip from Stanley "Bud" Rackley, veteran customs breaker, who was caught talking to a frosh coed last week.

Rackley, now dressed in a multi-colored striped jersey and a blue and white striped cotton skirt, was sentenced to wear the woman's outfit, complete with green hairbow, by Tribunal Tuesday night. He must continue to wear his laugh-provoking attire until next Thursday.

Gets Razzing

"I'm enjoying it immensely and having lots of fun, because everybody gets a big laugh out of it," Rackley said good-naturedly about his predicament. He said he's been asked for dates, but declines for he doesn't want to break customs again. The fellows in his Nittany dorm don't tease him too much, he said. However, he added, he gets quite a razzing in the mess hall.

Coed Old Friend

This customs violator doesn't have to observe all the women's rules, just those of dress and curtsying. Upperclass women may haze him, but so far, he said, only two have done so. Evidently they don't know the rules, he said.

Rackley borrowed the skirt from the coed he was caught talking to; the shirt is his own, and the ribbon he bought at the BX. He wouldn't disclose the name of the coed because, he doesn't want to incriminate her. He said he has known her since he was a sophomore in high school.

Not Enough Hazing

A music education major from Irwin, Rackley said that if he had seen the hatmen coming, he never would have been caught—unless of course, the guy just happened to be a track man.

Along with many fellow freshmen, he said he feels there is not enough hazing. He doesn't see much sense in having customs at all.

Rackley is a clarinetist in the Blue Band and will wear his uniform to Saturday's football game instead of his outstanding costume. He said he wouldn't mind wearing his feminine outfit, but it wouldn't look too well.

'Hams' Needed On Radio Staff

A call has been issued for all students holding amateur radio operators licenses who wish to affiliate with the College radio station staff as assistant operators.

All students interested in working on the College radio station W3YA and MARS station A3YA may send letters of application at once to Gilbert L. Crossley, assistant professor of electrical engineering.

The letter of application should contain experience, station call letters of the amateur station; the grade of amateur license held and other pertinent facts.

This call is not limited to students in the School of Engineering. Any student, faculty member, or employee of the College holding an amateur operators license is eligible to apply.

Prexy Speaks Of Inadequate School System

HARRISBURG, Sept. 27—(P)—Pennsylvania educators were told tonight by President Milton S. Eisenhower, that America spends "much too much on non-essentials", but that in comparison facilities of the public school system are inadequate.

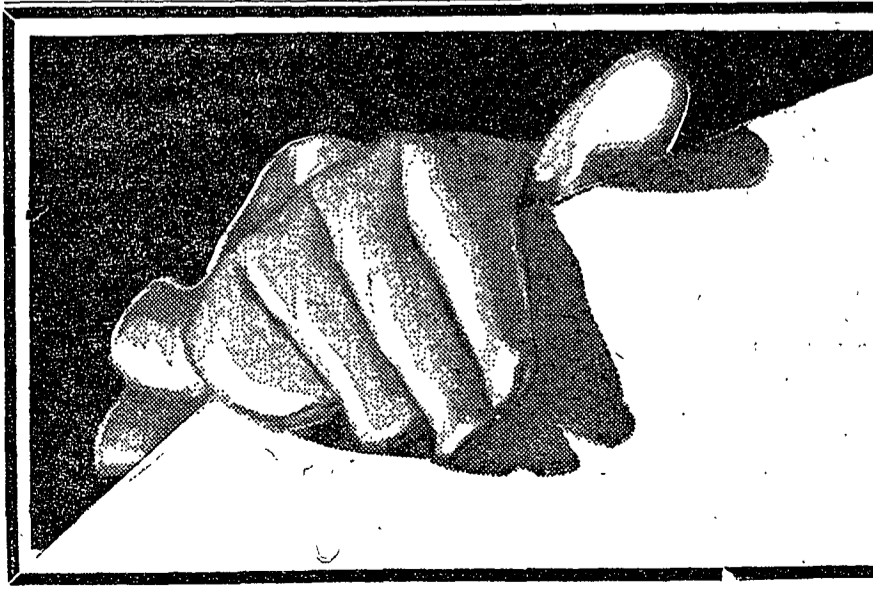

He noted in an address to the state education congress that the number of school age children is on the increase. But, he added, the facilities of the public school system as a whole are not adequate, either in quality or quantity.

"In some areas the inadequacy is downright pitiful," President Eisenhower said. "Many schools are impoverished and they lack teaching personnel and equipment essential to the vital job of modern education."

Since taxes are now too high, Eisenhower said "discriminating judgment" must be used in government spending. Opposing central control of education, he suggested that federal assistance should be limited "to areas where the economic structure is clearly too weak to meet minimum educational standards through local and state co-operation."

"Education is still, as Jefferson said, the fundamental support of the American system and its needs cannot—must not—be denied," he told the educators.

Dr. Samuel W. Blizzard Jr., associate professor of sociology and rural sociology, was elected secretary treasurer of the Rural Sociological Society at sessions held earlier this month at the University of Wisconsin.
