

Lions Meet BU Today

By ERNIE MOORE

Penn State will open its 1951 football season today on Beaver Field when the Nittany Lions meet Boston University. Kickoff time is 2 p.m.

An opening day crowd of 15,000 is expected to witness the first meeting between the two schools. Included in the crowd will be President Milton S. Eisenhower and his party, who will occupy seats in the senior section—instead of in the President's box atop Beaver Field. The President and his party will sit in row V (for victory), section EG.

The game will also mark the return of women cheerleaders. It will be the first time since 1947 that women have been represented on the Penn State cheerleading squad.

WMAJ will air the game. Chuck Thompson will do the play-by-play description.

Rip Engle, who will be starting his second season as coach of the Nittany Lions, announced that "the team is up, the spirit is good."

In his first season as coach, Engle led the Lions to a respectable five wins, three losses, one tie record.

against a team that already has played one game. The Terriers, coached by Aldo "Buff" Donelli, were defeated by William & Mary last Saturday, 34-25.

Led by its ace passer and quarterback, Harry "The Golden Greek" Agganis, whom Lion coaches regard as one of the best passers in the country, comparing him with Kentucky's Babe Parelli, BU is expected to display a sharp passing attack against Penn State this afternoon.

The Lions, usually a good pass defense team (they finished seventh in the nation in that department last year), have been working to improve their aerial defense all week.

The biggest question Penn State fans were forced to face was, "Whom will Rip Engle start at quarterback, Tony Rados or Bob Szajna?" Rip has finally decided on sophomore Bob Szajna to lead the Lion against Boston University this afternoon. Szajna made a good showing against Cornell in a scrimmage last week and has won Engle's vote for the starting job.

Coed Killed while On Hayride Party

By MARV KRASNANSKY

Corinne Joyce Kappes, 19-year-old Liberal Arts junior, was accidentally killed last night when she slipped off a hayride tractor on the Pine Grove Mills road, two-and-one-half miles west of State College.

Miss Kappes, a member of a party of about 30 couples, was pronounced dead at the Bellefonte Hospital at 11:15 p.m. Dr. E. H. Adams, surgeon at the hospital, said Miss Kappes died of internal injuries.

Slipped from Wagon

David Timothy, president of Delta Tau Delta, which sponsored the affair, said Miss Kappes had moved up front to the tractor which was pulling the wagon.

Timothy said she steered the tractor for a while and then decided to return to the wagon.

While moving from the tractor to the wagon, Timothy said, Miss Kappes slipped and fell beneath the left front wheel of the wagon.

On Dirt Road

At the time that Miss Kappes slipped from the wagon it was traveling over a bumpy dirt road.

Miss Kappes lost consciousness for several minutes, then regained it. She was rushed to the hospital by ambulance and died there approximately 30 minutes after arriving.

John H. Weber, Centre County deputy coroner, said last night that an autopsy would be performed today. He said the body had been removed to the Wetzler funeral home, Milesburg, to await the arrival of the girl's parents.

Miss Kappes was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Kappes, 315 8th street, Oakmont. She was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority.

She was accompanied on the hayride by John Carney, a junior in Liberal Arts.

3500 Attend Year's First Pep Rally

By BOB FRASER

A crowd of over 3500 packed the grounds in front of Recreation Hall last night to cheer and listen to the jokes of Patricia Marsteller and pep talks by President Milton S. Eisenhower, All-College President James Worth, and head football Coach "Rip" Engle. It was the first rally of the year, prior to today's game with Boston University.

The Kickoff Dance attended by over 1500, began promptly after the rally at 9 p.m. with Jack Huber and his orchestra playing. Proceeds of the dance will go to the Campus Chest.

Miss Marsteller, introduced to the crowd by Howard Wright, a cheerleader, was carried to the Recreation Hall steps wearing a Penn State football outfit bearing the numbers 33—the number of (Continued on page eight)

Sachs Draws Weather Lion

The lions depicting the weather featured on the front page of today's Daily Collegian were drawn by Walter Sachs, fifth semester Liberal Arts student.

"I'm one of the people who can't read the weather flags, so I made these," Sachs said as he pointed to the two dozen sketches of the Nittany Lion in various kinds of weather. The Liberal Arts student said he got the ideas for the drawings from several campus characters.

Called Skip by most of his Penn State acquaintances, Sachs drives around campus in a yellow MG. He is working for a central promotion agency and is handling promotion for the Campus Chest.

The 21-year-old junior says he made his first pen-and-ink drawing in a ninth grade Latin class.

Frosh, Black Hats Lead Pep Parade

By JIM GROMILLER and DAVE JONES

Several hundred cheering freshmen, led by the Blue Band and over 100 hatmen, formed the nucleus of last night's pep rally parade that wound up in front of Recreation Hall.

Upperclassmen and women joined the parade as it moved over the campus. The rally began in the men's dorm areas at about 7 p.m.

Hatmen invaded the West Dorm area shouting "We want the frosh" in an attempt to get freshmen out of their rooms to join in the rally parade.

Cheer Before McKee

When the hatmen met with little success in routing out the frosh, many freshmen, themselves, went into the dorms to bring their classmates out.

Directed by three cheerleaders, the frosh and hatmen formed in front of McKee Hall singing and cheering. Hatmen tried to prod freshmen from their rooms by shouting for them to show the school spirit they were always talking about.

A group of freshman women joined the cheering students as they passed Thompson Hall and went down the west side of the Mall to College Avenue where they moved singing down the middle of the street.

Barrage Meets Hatmen

Hatmen who attacked the Nittany-Pollock area also found the frosh reluctant to participate in the parade.

As the hatmen tried to arouse the frosh from their dorms they were met with a barrage of eggs, oranges and apples. In many dorms the freshmen barricaded doorways with furniture from the lounges.

Outside of Nittany dorm 23, a student with an Army bugle appeared and played Penn State songs in an attempt to arouse the freshmen. Hatmen yelled at frosh not to let the West Dorms get ahead of them.

Coeds Join Parade

The frosh were finally brought out of dorm 23, and that group formed the center of a throng that marched through Pollock Circle and stopped to call out the women from Simmons and McElwain Halls.

With numerous coeds joining the parade, the crowd moved (Continued on page eight)

Froth's Missing Canoe Returned at Dance

The long-lost Froth canoe, for which Ronald Bonn, Froth editor, fought, swore, sleuthed, and sweat, was returned last night at the Kickoff Dance by Marvin Krasnansky, Daily Collegian editor, and George Glazer, city editor.

Krasnansky, who presented the vessel to Bonn, claimed the $25 check that William Klisanin, Campus Chest chairman, had put up for reward. He promptly donated it to the Chest fund.

Shouts of "fix" echoed through Recreation Hall after the presentation. Some onlookers talked of a "staged" promotion stunt for Froth. But the truth is that there is a canoe race which will be a part of the Flaming Foliage Festival next Saturday on the Susquehanna river.

Former Student

A former student at the College, Robert Kotzbauer, will represent the Lock Haven Express in the race. He and an associate have challenged the Williamsport Gazette and Bulletin.

More than 30 other boat crews from all over the state will compete.

Bonn, who had appeared before All-College Cabinet in a futile attempt to recover the canoe Thursday, has made various and sundry statements—most of them unprintable—but he was all smiles when he learned of the whereabouts of the vessel.
