

Hockey Enthusiasts Compete with ROTC

In the fall a young girl's fancy sometimes turns to thoughts of hockey, to misquote a famous English poet. The Hockey Club, sponsored by the Women's Recreation Association, though it has no connection with the Department of English Literature, has captured the fancy of a great number of the College's coeds.

One bright afternoon this fall, a ROTC drill was being conducted on Holmes Field at the same time that a WRA hockey game was being played.

Wrong End

In the middle of the game, one of the officers marched his men down the center line and ordered them to halt. Another ROTC group stopped directly in front of one of the goalposts. Despite these tremendous odds, the hockey team made a goal, right between the shins of the drilling men.

It seems that the officers had misunderstood their orders and were supposed to have gone to the opposite end of the field.

Only Women Compete

About ten per cent of the freshman women have chosen hockey for their team sport during the first eight weeks. Mildred Lucey, Associate Professor of Physical Education and adviser to the WRA hockey teams, said that even though team members receive no academic credit, increasing numbers have come out for the sport each year.

Scotland, England, Ireland, and the Union of South Africa are among the nations that play field hockey. In these countries, both men and women participate. In the United States, competition in field hockey is limited to women.

Hockey Sports Day

Constance Applebee is credited with having first brought field hockey to the United States. Beginning at Bryn Mawr College in Philadelphia, this fast sport soon spread to many colleges throughout the East.

A group of WRA hockey enthusiasts is planning to visit a hockey team from Scotland, currently touring the United States. Bucknell University has invited Penn State to participate in its Hockey Sports Day. In addition to the College, visiting teams will be present from Wilson, Penn Hall, Juniata, Susquehanna, and Lycoming.

WRA hockey teams play every day, Monday through Thursday, at 4 p.m. on Holmes Field.

La Vie Deadline For Ed Seniors

Seniors in the School of Education should have their pictures taken for La Vie, before Tuesday. The Penn State Photo Shop will take the pictures between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., James Geffert, editor, announced yesterday.

Engineering seniors are asked to report to the Photo Shop between Wednesday and Oct. 19.

All seniors in the School of Agriculture and in the School of Chemistry and Physics who have had their pictures taken are requested to return their proofs to the Penn State Photo Shop before Tuesday.

Former USAF Men, Air Reserves to Meet

Active and former members of the Air Force and reserves units in the State College area and their wives have been invited to a meeting of the Nittany Squadron of the Air Force Association in 303 Willard at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

The program will include a motion picture of the Air Force Association's first "Wing Ding", which was held in Madison Square Garden.

Cwens Plan Annual Drag For Oct. 13

The Dungaree Drag, sponsored by Cwens, sophomore women's activity honorary, will be held from 9 p.m. to midnight Oct. 13 in Recreation Hall.

Tickets at $1.50 per couple for the girl-ask-boy affair may be bought from members of Cwens or at the Student Union desk in Old Main. A prize will be given for the most unique corsage that a coed makes for her date.

Jack Huber's eight-piece orchestra will play for the dance and refreshments will be served. Joanne Williams is general chairman for the dance. Joan Hutchon is publicity chairman. Elsa Pasline will handle posters and Margaret Shultz floats and dinner publications. Yvonne Carter is in charge of radio and newspaper publicity and Mary Ann Wertman is ticket chairman. Jean Berg is in charge of the hay wagon.

Sylvia Powers heads the decorations committee with Barbara Denniston, Miss Berg, Miss Hutchon and Kennetta Peters. Entertainment is under the direction of Grace Anderson. Mary Lee Martin and Jane Grubb are in charge of refreshments.

Mrs. Roosevelt Speaks to Coeds

Women are not measuring up to their political responsibility, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt told a group of women leaders at a convention sponsored by the American Council on Education.

JoAn Lee, who represented the College at the New York convention, attended the panel discussion on citizenship, at which Mrs. Roosevelt spoke. She was one of about 40 undergraduate students who attended the affair.

In her report to WSGA Senate Wednesday night, Miss Lee said that delegates from over 600 women's organizations were present.

Penn State was asked to send a representative by the Intercollegiate Association of Women Students, which will hold its annual convention here next year.

'Kickoff' Party Set to Herald Concert Drive

The drive for new members for the Community Concert series will open with a "kickoff" party to be held for volunteer workers at 7:30 p.m. Monday in Simmons Hall lounge.

Although most of the old members have renewed their memberships, new memberships are needed because of the graduation of some of last year's members.

Members from last season have a last chance to renew their memberships today in 204 Old Main from 1:30 to 5 p.m.

If persons interested in taking out a membership are not contacted by one of the volunteer workers they can get their tickets at 204 Old Main.

Harold Welch, of the Community Concert bureau, will discuss the operation of the concerts and will tell what stars are available through the series. The number of tickets sold determines the budget.

Campaign material will be distributed at the party which was arranged by Dean of Women Pearl O. Weston, a member of the concert committee.

Former Students Finish Processing

Two former students have completed their processing at the 2053d Reception Center, Fort Meade, Md.

They are Pvt. Robert Scholtz of Philadelphia, and Pvt. John Cox of Mt. Union. Cox is a member of Tau Kappa Epsilon and a former emcee of the All-College Talent Show.

Both men are assigned to the 101st Airborne Division, Camp Breckinridge, Ky.

PSCA Hike Sunday

The Penn State Christian Association Hiking Club will hike over six to eight miles of College farmland Sunday afternoon.

The group will leave from behind Old Main at 1:30 p.m. Any student wishing to go may sign the list in 304 Old Main.

Dutch Orphan Sends Thanks

A letter beginning "Dear Friends" arrived at White Hall this week. Theodora Buurman, a Dutch war orphan, was sending her thanks for the clothes she and her family received from WRA.

The WRA clothing drive held in the spring netted 400 pounds of feminine garments which were sent to Thea and her four brothers and sisters in Holland.

It's been two years since WRA, Thea through the efforts of the Foster Parents' organization in New York.

Each month she writes a letter to her Penn State guardians. She describes the alterations that have been made on the clothes or exclaims about the good food she and her relatives have enjoyed.

The favorite contents of the most recent boxes were the "bathing costumes" and the "playing suits."

The Sweetheart Dance to be held in February will raise the funds to help adopt Thea for another year.

Student in Hospital

Leonard Tomko, sixth semester physics student, was taken to Geisinger Hospital, Danville, Pa. by ambulance yesterday for treatment of a skin disease.

'Stolen' Wallets Worry Chi Phi

Members of Chi Phi fraternity learned yesterday that it isn't safe to leave wallets lying about on desks.

About 20 wallets containing almost $200 and five tickets to the Penn State-Villanova football game were "stolen" from the study rooms from 3 to 8 a.m. while the students were sleeping in the bedrooms of the suites.

The wallets were taken by two brothers to make the members of the house more careful. The two brothers said they could also have taken 30 watches which were lying on desks or in the desk drawers.

Six to Sell Tickets In Women's Dorms

Six students have been appointed to sell Community Forum tickets in the women's dormitories.
