

Six to Head Nittany Committees

Nittany Council Monday night accepted the appointment of six committee chairmen and three special officers from Weston Tomlinson, council president.

Arthur Latta was named head of the public welfare committee with the two immediate objectives being the establishing of a laundry case pick-up service, and devising a mail pick-up system which would eliminate the long waiting lines.

James Greenwood was appointed head of the scholarship committee. The committee was established to start a bluebook file similar to the ones collected by fraternities, with the hope of raising the scholastic standing of men in the area.

Collegian Shortage

James Himes was appointed chairman of the dining hall committee and advised to talk to the dining hall supervisors about elimination of long waiting lines.

Students in the area have complained that sufficient Collegians are not available to them. It was estimated that the area is short 200 Collegians daily. Nathan Goodman was named head of a committee to look into the situation.

John Frederick was appointed chief fire marshal to check fire extinguishers in the dorms and to report on fire hazards which exist.

Committees Appointed

Nicholas Catanese was appointed sergeant at arms and Steven Pontier was named parliamentarian.

Two special committees were appointed. Dale McElhattan heads a committee to see that the candy vending machines in the dorms are operating properly. Daniel Fagan is in charge of a constitutional committee to report any needed revisions in the council constitution.

Fagan, council representative on the AIM window display committee, reported that 12 Nittany dorms had displays in downtown windows. The window displays, sponsored through the cooperation of the State College Commerce Club, carry out the theme of Penn State in Pennsylvania Week.

'Splinterville Review'

Richard Klingensmith, representing the Student Union, reported that cards, checkers, and chess had been placed in the dorms for use by the men.

William Cole, president of Barons, Nittany-Pollock social group, announced that tryouts for the "Splinterville Review," a talent show for area men, will be held shortly. The show will be presented Dec. 11.

Traffic --

(Continued from page one) the regulation is short enough for many to go unapprehended, Weigand said. Others, he added, probably would be guilty of violating the one-way traffic by accident since it would be effective for only a relatively short period each week.

The experimental one-way system was successful in eliminating a jam on Shortlidge road last weekend, and many students had signified that they favored the experimental system.

Weigand pointed out, however, that on the weekends on which tieups occurred, no campus patrolmen were on duty along the road. He said that with strict enforcement of the no parking regulations, traffic should be able to move freely in both directions.
