

Parking Area Provided For Homecoming Crowd

With one of the largest crowds in the history of Penn State expected on campus this weekend, sufficient parking area has been made available for all cars, according to Walter Weigand, director of the physical plant.

The partially completed parking lot, east of the TUB, near the fertility plots, will be available for parking this weekend. The Mitchell Farm property, north of the pasture field, will also be used to accommodate approximately 800 cars.

Other temporary parking areas that will be available are the practice field near the golf course, the area west of the student vegetable gardens, and a small area east of Hort Woods. In addition, all the regular parking lots will be open.

Capt. Philip Mark, of the campus patrol, has asked everyone to cooperate by "not parking in service drives, private drives, and main roads, where signs indicate no parking. This is to facilitate emergencies and regular drivers."

Patrolmen will be located all over campus. There will be 35 in uniform and 15 in plain clothes. Many will be located in the parking areas to help drivers in parking. Mark asked drivers not to block another car if no patrolman is available when they are parking.

Mark said, "With full cooperation of everyone, parking and traffic for the game tomorrow will run smoothly."

14 Pledges Paint Children's Ward

Fourteen members of Phi Sigma Delta painted the children's ward of the Centre County Hospital and the Waddle rural school as a "hell week" project.

Two coats of paint were put on by the students who worked most of Wednesday night and finished about midnight last night.

Irwin Gleb, Ronald Isenberg, Murray Horewitz, Ronald Lench, Donald Pripstein, and Sidney Ziff painted the hospital ward. Arthur Cohen, Herman Golomb, Michael Kirshner, Allen Plotkin, Robert Kaufman, Robert Seigle, Murray Jacobson and Stewart Allen painted the one room school house.

Dormitory Rooms Are Still Available

Rooms are still available in Pollock Circle dorms for the fraternity undergraduates who are being temporarily displaced by the large number of alumni returning here for the homecoming festivities.

Dorm 20, not Dorm 30 as reported by the Daily Collegian yesterday, is the office in the Pollock area.

Each fraternity will be allowed a maximum of 15 reservations. Individual students desiring Saturday night accommodations must contact the office at Dorm 20 before 12 noon today. A charge of two dollars a night per person must be paid in advance.

Ag Pavilion Transformed For Show

A complete transformation of the interior of the School of Agriculture pavilion is under way to prepare for the annual Horticulture Show this Saturday and Sunday.

Part of the landscape exhibit will be a 20-foot living evergreen tree, with a patio and pool surrounded by ornamental plants, growing flowers, and a lawn. The tree will be seen as the visitor enters the pavilion.

Soft music will carry out the theme, "Autumn Symphony". Examples of work by students in ornamental horticulture, plant breeding, clericulture, landscape, floriculture, and pomology will be displayed.

Floriculture students, headed by Flower Strang, will demonstrate ways to arrange a dozen roses in vases and baskets.

The ornamental group will display tuberous begonias and geraniums which will flank both sides of the pavilion.

Varieties of apples commercially grown in Pennsylvania comprise the pomology exhibit, featuring a huge keystone of apples. Arthur Munson, who is in charge of the plant breeding and clericulture exhibit, will tell the entire story of vegetable production from seed to harvest with several kinds of vegetables.

At the far end of the pavilion the refreshment stand will provide a modernistic motif, with its roof suspended from cables rather than the usual supports.

Francis Hoffman, show manager, and his assistant, Joe Ondrejko, are coordinating the work of various subdivisions.

The Horticulture Show is open to the public all day Saturday and Sunday.

Houts to Give Oil Painting To College

An oil painting by Mrs. Lucy Kemmerer Lederer of State College will be presented to the College in a ceremony at 4:30 p.m. today in the lounge of Old Main by O. W. Houts, also of the borough.

President Milton S. Eisenhower will receive the painting, which will be added to the collection in Old Main.

The painting is one of several by Mrs. Lederer of the ore operations at Scotia, a booming iron mining center west of State College prior to the turn of the century. For the paintings, Mrs. Lederer conducted extensive research of the operations which enabled her to depict accurately the mules, dinky engines, shovels, and other equipment.

In commenting on the painting, Mrs. Lederer says that she wanted not so much to be literal but to "first of all make a nice painting."

Mrs. Lederer, wife of Col. Eugene W. Lederer of Manor Hills, is a graduate of the College and has done some graduate work here. During the summers she has studied under Emile Walters and Hobson Pittman at Pratt Institute, Art Student's League in New York, and at the National Gallery in Washington, D. C. Her work has been done under such artists as Kenneth Hayes Miller, Reginald Marsh, Alexander Brook, and John Carrol.

Widely known for her painting, Mrs. Lederer has exhibited in Corcoran Gallery, Washington; Virginia Museum, Richmond; Art Institute of Chicago; the Cincinnati Museum; and in Philadelphia at the Art Alliance. She is listed in Who's Who in the East and in Who's Who in American Art.
