The five finalists for Belle Hop queen have been announced by Adam Kraczk, chairman of the dance committee.

Patricia Day, Marian Gray, Nancy Hensel, Jean Mastin, and Gwen Price were selected to be finalists by members of the Pennsylvania Hotel Association, hotel managers of the state.

Miss Day is a freshman in home economics and is being sponsored by Chi Phi. Kappa Alpha Theta is sponsoring Miss Gray, a member of the sorority. She is a senior in liberal arts.

Nittany Dorm '44 submitted the picture of Miss Hensel, a freshman in elementary education.

Alpha Xi Delta is sponsor for Miss Mastin, a junior in music education. Miss Price, a freshman journalism major, is McAllister Hall's candidate.

The final judging will take place at the ball Saturday night at Recreation Hall. Applause will determine the winner. Judges will be James Worth, All-College president, who will represent the student body; John Lee, manager of the Nittany Lion Inn, representing the hotel men; and R. A. Bower, professor of hotel administration, representative of the faculty.

Tickets on Sale

Marilyn Franklin, last year's queen, will crown the winner. In addition to a trophy, the queen will receive a complimentary room at the William Penn Hotel for Pitt weekend and two tickets on the 50 yard line for the Pitt-Penn State game. Runners-up will also be awarded prizes.

Tickets for the ball are available at the Hotel Administration department in the Home Economics Building, at the Corner Room, or from any hotel administration student. Tickets are $2.40 per couple.

Bavarian Graduate Enjoys Dairy Work

Although he holds a doctor's degree from a European university, Hans Meierhofer, one of two Bavarian trainees enrolled at Penn State, is enthusiastic about the practical instruction given in the dairy manufacturing undergraduate courses he is taking.

A graduate of the University of Bonn with a major in economics, he took post-graduate work in agricultural economics at the Technical University of Munich.

During his stay on campus, Meierhofer is living at the Alpha Zeta house. Rosshaupten, his home town, located near the Austrian border, is in the center of Germany's cheese-making industry.

Works at Creamery

After graduation, Meierhofer worked in cheese plants of the area. It was work in this field which resulted in his selection for further study under the new training program of the Marshall plan.

In addition to his classes, Meierhofer spends about three days a week working in the College creamery, where he is learning details of the manufacturing of cheese, butter, and ice cream. He says that it is this type of practical knowledge which he lacks.

Most of the processing plants in Bavaria are cooperatively owned by dairymen, he explained.

Almost all of the milk produced is converted into cheese of various kinds.

New Plants

Meierhofer hopes to combine teaching with management duties of a cheese plant when he returns to Germany next summer.

Currently new plants are under construction to boost production

'Zump' Returns -

He admitted that he couldn't really say just how he got started, but he did say that as a boy, he hitch-hiked around the country, and ended up attending an art school in White Plains, N.Y.

From there he started out traveling again, and got into his present work.

He figures he hits about 50 campuses a year. Of all the fraternity campuses he hits, he rates Illinois, Michigan and Penn State in that order of beauty.

And of all the houses he has seen, he thinks the Delta Tau Delta house at the College is one of the prettiest.
