Sports Program Outlook Brightens

The recent announcement that golf would be returned to the College varsity sports picture was, though met with mixed reaction, one of the quickest and most concrete acts of cooperation with student opinion by the administration in recent years.

The dropping of five varsity sports last spring was a hard blow to a sports-minded student body and brought home to us all very forcibly that financial difficulties were to be met in the only way possible, by budget cutting.

It was a more terrible blow to the fans and participants of the five sports, who felt that they should suffer only to the extent of budget cuts within their activities but not by elimination of the activity.

The answer of the College at that time was that the necessary economies could not be realized unless the five sports were dropped from the intercollegiate level. BUT, the promise was made at that time that as soon as the financial way was clear for the addition of the sports, it would be done.

It is regrettable that all five could not have been added to the athletic roster, but it is reasonable that the financial picture could have improved to the extent that only one sport could be added.

In view of this action, it also seems probable that the others will be added if and when the possibility occurs. They may be added one by one, but that is not important. The important thing is that they will be reinstated when possible. Of that the student body may be assured—and this assurance is a nice feeling to have at this time.

No Leniency on IFC Code Violations

In a tense meeting Wednesday night, the Interfraternity Council stood by its executive committee and its board of control in imposing a four-week period of social probation on Pi Lambda Phi for violations of the rushing code.

The action by the full Interfraternity Council was in a sense a vote of confidence for the men who run the IFC. But the overwhelming vote against Pi Lambda Phi's appeals—27 to 11 on both counts—is an indication that fraternity men realize the soundness of the rule and the importance of its enforcement.

Pi Lambda Phi first asked that the two men ordered depledged by the IFC for not having a 1.0 All-College average be allowed to stay in the house. This appeal was answered from the floor by one of the representatives who said that his house, like Pi Lambda Phi, had had the opportunity to pledge men without a 1.0 average. Like Pi Lambda Phi, he said, his house needed the men financially. But the rule was there and the rule was to be obeyed, so the men without a 1.0 average were not pledged.

Pi Lambda Phi broke the rule and now must pay the full penalty, he said.

Pi Lambda Phi also asked that it be allowed to hold a social affair during Junior Prom weekend. Again the fraternity was voted down, 27 to 11.

With its firm stand, the Interfraternity Council has indicated that this is one rule no fraternity can afford to break with the hope for leniency in the event they are caught at an infraction. The council should be commended for its stand.

PSCA Gift

The true spirit of giving for the sake of giving and not for the shallow reward of praise was illustrated in the anonymous gift of $7500 to the Penn State Christian Association. The alumnus who donated the money for the use of the PSCA and the College Chapel gave it in just that spirit, not to gain publicity or praise for himself.

At the same time, the gift is a testimony to the idea that a non-denominational college does not have to be an irreligious one. It shows that some people believe that religion has a place in the lives of students at any college, even if the primary aim of that college seems to be to prepare students to earn a living.

Such generosity and insight must have their own reward.

We add our grateful thanks to those of all the College's students who will benefit from this gift.

First of Monthly Reading Programs Set for Monday

The first Monthly Reading Hour of the year will be held at 8 p.m. Monday at the Home Economics Living Center.

The reading hours, sponsored by the College oral interpretation classes, have been held during the past four years and are open to the public.

Program chairman for Monday's hour is Ann Jeanette Jones. The program will include four readings by students.

The first selection, "Margery Rawlings' 'Mother of Mannville,'" will be given by Connie Melvin. Regina Friedman will interpret a group of six poems, "The Matin Song," by Thomas Heywood, "Suppose," by Walter de la Mare, "Neolithic Man," by Charlotte Gilman, "Fiddler Jones," by Edgar Lee Masters, "My Friend," by Robert Coffin, and "Remember," by Christina Rossetti, as the second reading.

Don Colbert will read "Men of Steel," by William Rose Benet as the third selection. The last reading, by Phyllis Brenchman, will be "A Nice Old-fashioned Romance," by William Saroyan.

The zither contains between thirty and forty strings.

College Cabinet Approves List

All-College Cabinet approved Thursday night a list of 31 students to be submitted to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities." A committee headed by Clair George selected the following students.

Betty Anders, Carolyn Barrett, Jeannine Bell, Milton Bernstein, Ronald Bonn, Carrol Chapman, Harry Cover, Byron Craine, Charles Falzone, Florenz Fenton, James Geffert, Clair George, Thomas Jurchak, William Klisanin, and Marvin Krasnansky.

Marilyn Levitt, David Margolf, Nancy McClain, Richard Mills, David Mutchler, David Olmsted, Millard Rehberg, Peter Sarantopoulos, Edward Shanken, David Stabler, James Wharton, Stanley Wengert, Marilyn Williams, Mary Jane Woodrow, and James Worth.

Geffert's name was added by George Donavan, manager of associated student affairs. A maximum of 32 names were allowed to be submitted to the publication.

A goblin was thought to be a misshapen European dwarf who went about tricking people with malicious intent.
