

5 to Judge Harvest Ball Finalists

Five student council presidents have been chosen to help pick the Harvest Ball Queen Dec. 1. They will judge the audience applause the night of the ball.

The presidents are Bryson Craine, Chemistry and Physics; Ralph Egolf, Education; Charles Falzone, Engineering; Edward Shanken, Liberal Arts; and Millard Rehburg, Mineral Industries.

The three finalists will be chosen Monday afternoon by Louis Bell, director of public information; Ridge Riley, alumni executive secretary; and Lyman Jackson, dean of the School of Agriculture.

Tickets for the ball are now on sale at Student Union, William Nichol, chairman of the ticket committee, announced yesterday. Tickets are $2 per couple.

AIM-Phi Sig Benefit Dance Set for Tonight

Fred Hartwick and his orchestra will play at the square dance sponsored by the Association of Independent Men and Phi Sigma Sigma from 9 to midnight tonight in Recreation Hall.

The dance will benefit the sorority's national philanthropic project, the Rheumatic Fever Fund. These two organizations joined in sponsoring the same type of affair last year. Net profits from last year's dance totaled $243, all of which went to the fund.

Dancing at the affair will be both round and square, with Fred Hartwick doing the calling.

Also Pasline and Moylan Mills are in charge of arrangements. Tickets, priced at 25 cents per person, may be obtained from members of AIM and the sorority, or at the Student Union desk in Old Main. They may also be purchased at the door.

Korean Truce --

Another item is the exchange of prisoners of war. It presents extremely few obstacles in the way of becoming actuality. And since the atrocity report exploded a few days ago, the accomplishment of this portion of the agenda becomes imperative. Reactions to the report caused comments from a demand to a vigorous renewal of fighting to a mild expression of indignation.

If the whole matter is studied carefully and the evasive and inconclusive truce talks evaluated, one point can be made. The men in the tent at Panmunjom are either exercising their oratorical prowess to browbeat the opposition into armistice or stalling for time prior to the big war. Squeezed between all this are the confused, disgusted, and the dead.

The West needs time to gain military strength and its eyes usually are focused on Europe. For that reason the Korean war might really be, as has been suggested in the past, a forgotten war while the West becomes superior in Europe. However, no man can fight his best with one hand tied behind his back.

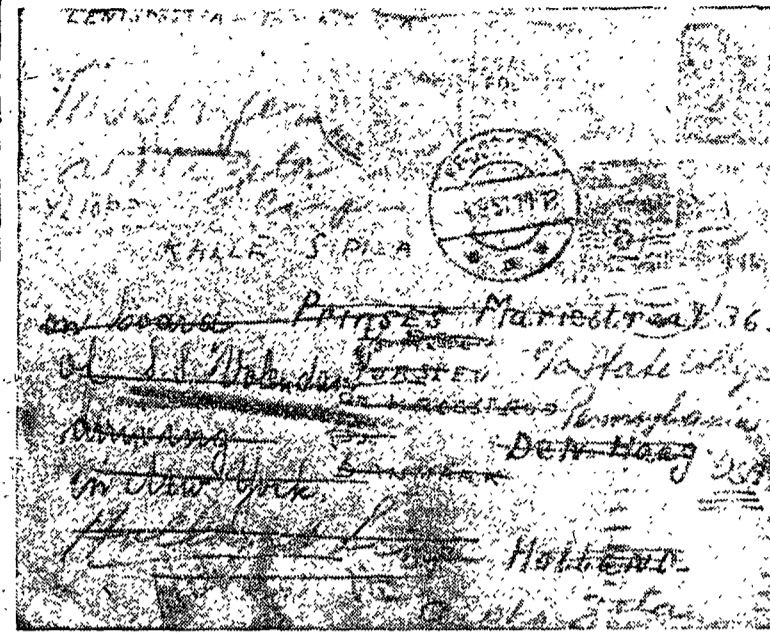

Coed Journ Majors To Hear Speakers

Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary, will hold its annual fall tea from 4 to 5 p.m. tomorrow in the northeast lounge of Atherton Hall.

All women journalism majors have been invited to attend. They will hear three prominent Pennsylvania women journalists speak.

The speakers will be Rebecca Gross, editor of the Lock Haven Express; Mrs. Robinson McIlvaine, president of the Pennsylvania Women's Press Association and co-editor of the Downingtown Archive; and Mrs. Marion Shatto, women's editor of the Sharon Herald.

Versatile Program Needed, Dean Says

By DOT BENNETT

Pre-medical colleges should strive for a well-rounded curriculum, Dr. Marion Fay, dean of the Women's Medical College, said yesterday.

She added that it was previously believed that students needed only science credits in their pre-medical education, but now most medical schools are beginning to insist that students have a bachelor's degree.

Dr. Fay said a more rounded course is necessary because doctors are often called upon to express opinions about "almost anything," and they must be able to work with and understand all types of people.

Have Been Successful
Dr. Fay and Dr. Irene Maher, assistant dean at the Women's Medical College, are visiting the campus as part of a tour to Pennsylvania colleges.

Thursday they spoke at a meeting of Alpha Epsilon Delta, pre-medical honorary.

Asked about opportunities for women in the field of medicine, Dr. Fay said women doctors have been successful in every field of medicine. She added that there is an especially good opportunity in surgery, although it requires long and expensive training, and until recently there has been a feeling of prejudice. Dr. Maher said a woman doctor could succeed anywhere, "if she's good. She's got to be good."

New Building
The Women's Medical College, in Philadelphia, celebrated its 100th anniversary last year. It was founded by a group of men doctors because there were at that time no medical schools for women. There were 40 women in the first class, now there are 186 in the school. Although they take only women undergraduates, men are admitted as residents, graduates, and faculty members.

Dr. Fay said the Women's Medical College has graduates all over the country and in several foreign countries as missionaries. During the reign of Queen Victoria, the first Indian woman to become a doctor was graduated there, and the dean received a letter from the Queen thanking the college for helping the woman to get her education. Dean Fay said there have always been many orientals at the school, as well as students from other foreign countries. The first woman medical missionary in the world was a graduate of the college.

Dr. Fay went to the Women's Medical College in 1935 as head of the Department of Physiology. In 1943, Dean Margaret Craighill went in the Army, and Dr. Fay was acting dean until 1946 when Dean Craighill resigned, and she became dean.

Dr. Maher was one of Dean Fay's students, and is now assistant dean, and practices medicine in Germantown.

Dr. Fay said there are very few women who begin medical studies and don't finish, and that 93% remain in practice after they are graduated, even though they may marry, sometimes even before they begin to study medicine.

She said Penn State students who attend Women's Medical College are especially good students.

Letter Arrives 4 Months Late From Finland

The dogged determination of four countries' postal departments brought Finnish exchange student Kalle Sipila a girl friend's letter Thursday, just four months after she mailed it.

Marja Linnala, a hometown friend, gave Sipila a wood-carved bear as a going-away present before he left for the U.S. On the trip from Sweden to Denmark, Sipila lost the bear's collar, and wrote Marja for another. Her reply has been keeping just one step behind him ever since.

Marja's letter was mailed from Helsinki, addressed to Denmark, where Sipila was staying at a friend's farm. By the time it got there, though, he was off to Holland, visiting more friends.

From Holland, Sipila sailed for New York aboard the S. S. Volendam, Marja's letter in hot pursuit. The letter got to New York all right, but the Volendam, somehow, arrived in Montreal, Canada.

Lost and alone, Marja's letter stayed in the big town just long enough to pick up a "Save Water" postmark, and then took passage all the way back to Helsinki for a fresh start.

Sipila, meanwhile, finally wound up at the Alpha Zeta house. This time he stayed in one place long enough for the now elderly letter to sail the Atlantic a third time, cross the mountains, and at long last inform him that Marja had received his request for a collar for his bear.

Bucknell Students To Visit Wesley

Approximately 20 students from the Methodist student organization at Bucknell University will visit the Wesley Foundation for a special Thanksgiving program tomorrow.

The group will arrive in the afternoon, and, after a tour of the campus and the foundation, will eat supper in the social room of St. Paul's Methodist Church.

At 6:30 p.m. a one-act play, "The Separatist," will be presented by the Wesley Players in the upper room of the church. The play, their first production this year, is directed by Anne Peifer, a senior in drama. The cast includes Charlotte Sloat, Milton Snodgrass, William Valentine, Ned Cole, Marjorie Shaffer, Ralph Laudenslayer, Stephen Pierce, Ronald Campbell, and Dorothy Fletcher.

J. Paul Sheedy* Switched to Wildroot Cream-Oil Because He Flunked The Finger-Nail Test

WHENEVER SHEEDY gave a gal the glad ham she turned up her snoot. Poor Paul took pen and oink and wrote a litter home: "I'm sty-mied. All the gals think I'm a boar. To get a date is a pig's feat!" His mother wrote back: "Even a dullard like you should know enough to borrow his roommate's Wildroot Cream-Oil! It's non-alcoholic. Contains soothing Lanolin. Removes loose, ugly dandruff. Helps you pass the Finger-Nail Test. Makes your hair look neat and well-groomed." That was the pig-me-up Sheedy needed. Now he's imporkant... hogs and kisses all the girls. Better try Wildroot Cream-Oil yourself. Get it at your favorite drug or toilet goods counter—and ask for professional applications at your barber chop!
