

Chest Returns Net over $8000

Total income from the Campus Chest drive has not yet been tabulated, but drive officials said yesterday they believe returns will be "over $8000."

Final totals will not be available until later this week, William Klisanin, drive chairman, said yesterday, because returns that were handed in on the last day of the drive could not be tabulated until

Goas to Head Study Division

T. Stewart Goas has been named to succeed David B. Pugh, head of the instructional division of Central Extension at the College, who retired in September.

Goas' duties will include supervision of all credit and non-credit courses of study offered by the College through the Central Extension office. This includes the freshman and sophomore work at six centers; special evening classes in more than a dozen other cities; the motion picture and recording studio, film library, extension library, correspondence study, and institute of public safety; the technical institute programs at ten centers; and a wide variety of programs of an informal nature on and off the main campus.

Goas graduated from the College in 1931, and returned to the campus in 1949 to supervise graduate and undergraduate instruction in extension. He is the former head of the Penn State Center in Pottsville. He is a member of the Pennsylvania State Association for Adult Education, Masons, Phi Iota Sigma, Pi Mu Epsilon, Kappa Phi Kappa, Pennsylvania Historical Society, Pennsylvania Association of Junior Colleges, and past president of the Rotary Club.

Shortages Halt Rec Hall Work

Shortages of critical materials are holding up the construction of the addition to Recreation Hall, according to a report from the Associated Press.

Shortages of such items as steel, copper, and other items have hampered the multi-million dollar building programs of two state agencies, the General State Authority and the State Public School Building Authority. Several other colleges have also suffered long delays in obtaining these critical materials.

"All of these applications have been pending in Washington for months and so far no allocations have been made," Oscar N. Lindahl, GSA executive, said.

Lindahl said that about ten per cent of his agency's 200 projects have been hit so far by serious shortages.

At the present time construction has been halted temporarily on a building for 400 mental patients at the Woodville State Hospital, a new admissions building at the Dixmont State Hospital and an auditorium at the California State Teachers College, according to Lindahl.

IT'S A FACT

In 1859 vacations were strangely supposed to interfere with school work, so the college sessions ran from February to December without a break.

Vacations sure have changed at Penn State. Everyone takes a vacation—even "It's a Fact," but it will be back in 1952. Until then, Merry Christmas and Happy New Year from Mr. and Mrs. Vic, the bar maids, and the kitchen crew.

The store will remain open for business until the holidays.

'Who's in News' To Contain 420 Student Sketches

About 420 student biographies will be included in the sixth edition of "Who's in the News at Penn State," Leonard Kolasinski, editor of the booklet, said yesterday.

The booklet is scheduled for printing during the Christmas vacation and will be ready for distribution about Jan. 4, he said. Further information about distribution will be published when the booklet is received on campus. Kolasinski said the Grit Printing Co. at Williamsport has been contracted to print the booklet.

The cover for "Who's in the News" will be brown leather-right paper, an imitation leather stock. As in former years the booklet will be six by nine inches in size. Minor changes in style and typography were made, Kolasinski said.

College May Be Site for Next ICG Convention

Members of the International Conference on Government have discussed the possibility of the College as the site for the next regional ICG convention.

A definite decision as to whether facilities for an estimated 100 delegates will be offered for the convention will be made at a meeting scheduled for Dec. 5.

Prof. Lee Carter, faculty advisor for the group, announced results of a spur-of-the-moment balloting taken at the last meeting. Although he would give no actual figures, Carter stated that the group showed a slight leaning toward Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as a possible presidential nominee.

Joseph Galati, who serves as assistant regional director of central Pennsylvania, reported on the state executive meeting held in Harrisburg on Nov. 18.

He said the ICG presidential nomination convention will be held April 12-15 in Harrisburg.

Dr. Fenske to Address Engineers in Richland

Dr. M. R. Fenske, director of the petroleum refining laboratory, is spending several days at Richland, Wash., visiting research groups at the General Electric Co.'s atomic energy installation.

Today Fenske will address a joint meeting at Richland of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers. The subject of his talk will be "Fuels and Lubricants—Recent Developments."

Sale Fraud Care Urged By NASPA

Students should be wary of magazine subscription at low prices in return for cash or checks made out to the salesman, according to the National Association of Student Personnel Administration.

The association stated that many colleges, especially in some of the central states, have discovered magazine salesmen on their campuses who operate quickly and leave the area before they can be questioned.

NASPA advises that best defense against these salesmen is to avoid giving cash or checks made out to the salesman in exchange for magazine subscriptions. A reliable agent will ask his customer to make out the check to the International Reader's League or another reliable organization.

NASPA also urges students to be on guard against a Who's Who type file, called the "Collegiate Social Register."

The persons operating the register, working from Los Angeles, ask students, fraternities, and student groups to spend large sums of money for the privilege of being listed in this file.

The Association believes the register is designed more for getting students' money than for any social ends, and urges students and organizations not to spend their money on the file.

Reading Hour Set for Tonight

Three students in advanced oral interpretation classes will perform at the monthly reading hour at 8 tonight in Simmons lounge.

Johly Oswalt, a fifth semester Spanish major, will present "Too Early Spring" by Stephen Vincent Benet. Another Benet piece, "No Visitors," will be read by Allen Adair, a fifth semester English major. Barbara Klopp, seventh semester English major, will read "The Cradle Song" by G. Martinez Sierra.

The program, an hour in length, is the second of its nature this semester. Sally Jones will act as chairman of the program.

Reading hours of this type date back to 1948 when mostly faculty members performed. In its first year there were only two students performing. However, this set up was reversed last year as 26 students took part in the reading hours with no faculty members at all.

Harriett D. Nesbitt, assistant professor of public speaking, is in charge of the monthly reading hours.

Tomorrow Is Deadline For Inking Material

Tomorrow is the deadline for submission of material for Inking, campus literary magazine. Contributions of prose, poetry, or fiction may be turned in at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

8-Week Run Of 'Tartuffe' Starts Friday

Penn State Players' interpretation of the 17th century Moliere comedy about hypocrisy, "Tartuffe," opens Friday night at Center Stage.

The Friday and Saturday night performances begin a scheduled eight-weekend run for which Players' has provided elaborate costumes.

Tickets are now on sale at the Student Union desk in Old Main. Tickets cost 90 cents for the Friday evening show and $1.25 for the Saturday performance. Refreshments are served Saturday nights.

Warren S. Smith, associate director of Penn State Players, is directing the show, the second at Center Stage this season.

Jay Broad will play the lead role of the religious hypocrite Tartuffe. Lee Stern plays Orgon; Sunny Goldstein, Dorine, and Helen Jaskol, Elmire.

Supporting cast includes Kaye Vinson, as Cleante; Moylan Mills as Damis; Richard Haynes as Valeve; Cy Rubenfeld, as Loyal; and Jane Montgomery plays Mariane. Guyla Woodward is cast as Pernelle and Yvonne Badwey as Filpote.

Coke Machines Violate Policy

West Dorm Council last night abandoned plans to obtain coke machines for the West Dorms after the student welfare committee reported that present College policy would not permit them.

A spokesman for the committee told the council at its brief meeting that since soft drinks are sold in the Lion's Den, the College will not permit coke machine competition.

The committee, also charged with investigating a magazine rack for the snack bar, reported that no workable method of selling the magazines could be found.
