

College Sportswear Inc., Keeler's Offer Aid to Student Fire Victims

Keeler's Book Store, and College Sportswear Inc. have offered to aid the students who suffered losses in the Gentzel Building blaze. The names of these State College merchants can now be added to the list of those who have offered to aid the fire victims.

Keeler's said that they would be glad to donate textbooks to students whose books were lost in the fire. Ruined textbooks is one of the major problems facing the men who were living in the Gentzel Building before it was hit by the fire.

Civil Service Will Conduct Examinations

The U.S. Civil Service will conduct examinations for the positions of cartographer, cartographic aide, and cartographic draftsman for work in Washington, D.C. and vicinity.

Applicants are not required to take a written examination, but they must have had from three months to eight years of appropriate experience, depending on the kind and grade of position, or appropriate education for all of the jobs paying up to $3100, and for part of the experience necessary for the higher level positions.

Applicants for the cartographic draftsman positions must submit a sample of their work with their applications.

Additional information and application forms may be secured directly from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington 25, D.C., as well as from most first and second class post offices. Applications will be accepted in the commission's office in Washington until further notice.

2 Students Place In Sketch Exhibit

Edward Zimmerman, seventh semester architecture student, and James Cartey, seventh semester architectural engineering student, placed high in the Traveling Sketch Exhibit contest recently held by Scarab, national architecture honorary, at the Washington State College, Washington.

Edward Zimmerman won third place and first honorable mention for his entries, and James Cartey won second honorable mention. The winning entries, consisting of oil and water color paintings and architectural models, will go on tour at colleges throughout the country. Penn State will play host to the exhibit contest next year.

AIM Will Interview Kenworthy on Radio

Wilmer E. Kenworthy, director of student affairs, will be interviewed next week on the first of a series of radio broadcasts sponsored by the Association of Independent Men.

During this and other programs Moylan Mills and Leonard Kolasinski will interview administration officials on problems of interest to independent men. College news will also be broadcast.

TB Tests Continue

Any student who missed the required tuberculin test scheduled for Tuesday may take it any time today at the dispensary in the basement of Old Main.

Replace Clothing

The value of the textbooks lost by the men in the fire amounts to hundreds of dollars, and Keeler's feels they cannot be expected to replace all of these books. For this reason, it will be necessary for the men to salvage as many of the books as they can so that more men may be aided by the offer.

College Sportswear Inc. has also offered to help the fire victims by replacing some of the clothing lost in the fire. The value of the clothing lost in the blaze is probably the largest single item on the list. This offer together with the fund being collected jointly by the Association of Independent Men, Interfraternity Council, Panhellenic Council, and Leonides is expected to effectively aid the students to get back on their feet.

Deadline Saturday

As yet, only about half of the fire victims have reported to Daniel DeMarino, assistant dean of men. It is imperative that the rest of the men report to the dean of men's office with an itemized list of their losses, according to DeMarino. Until this is done, it will be impossible to help any of the men.

Saturday noon is the deadline for students who desire help to contact the dean of men's office.

AEC Proposes New Expansion

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 — (AP)—Chairman Gordon Dean of the Atomic Energy Commission said tonight that tentative plans are now being developed for a vast new expansion of America's atomic weapons output—the third since 1949.

Dean said the proposed expansion was spurred by the threat of the "Communist colossus" towering over the world's free nations and was made feasible, at least in part, by fresh discoveries of uranium deposits in Canada and Colorado.

"There has recently been a very decided improvement in the uranium supply outlook," Dean said in a speech prepared for the annual mobilization dinner of the American Ordnance Association.

"Although the known sources of uranium available to us today are certainly far from inexhaustible, they nevertheless do represent a substantial improvement over the situation which prevailed until a relatively short while ago."

Dean said one of the major reasons "why a further expansion of the atomic energy program is now being considered" is the fact that recent technological developments "have made possible the consideration of atomic weapons for tactical as well as strategic employment."

Forestry Students Orient at Mont Alto

By MIMI UNGAR

Have you ever heard of Mont Alto? Oh, yes, those of you who spent your first year there can surely remember the name, and you can probably give a dissertation on the work involved in spending your first year as a forestry major there.

The 120 freshmen now spending their time at Mont Alto are doing lots of work and they say that there is more to come. Ahead of them are the tasks of using cross-cut saws and axes as well as numerous field trips into the mountains surrounding the Mont Alto Branch of the Pennsylvania State Forest School. All of this is just a beginning for the three years of advanced training which follows at the College.

Perhaps you will believe the amount of work the Mont Alto boys do when you hear the amount of food they consume. Maurice K. Goddard, professor of forestry and director of the Mont Alto branch, points out that the "laboratory work" gives the boys a good appetite, for they eat about 10 per cent more food than students on the main campus. The boys usually add some fat to their bones while at the forestry branch, Goddard reports.

During the first week of this semester, the freshmen helped clear about 50 acres of land for a new water supply dam for Waynesboro. This was the first time for many of the boys to handle axes and it is reported that they became fairly skillful before the week's end.

The old saying, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," holds true at Mont Alto. Along with basketball, archery, and a wide variety of outdoor sports, the boys also have a rather convenient contact with the fairer sex. Wilson College, Chambersburg, occasionally invites the foresters to dances.

Originally the State Forest School, Mont Alto was deeded to the College in 1937, even though it had been operated by the College since 1929. It offers excellent opportunity for work in basic forestry and botany because of its location in the mountains.

The foresters are also required to take chemistry, mathematics, English composition, physical education, and Air and Army ROTC training. In their closely knit class and recreational groups, the students at Mont Alto are able to become well acquainted with each other, which will aid in the continuance of their work together for three more years at Penn State.

Whether it be swinging an ax or using a cross-cut saw, the boys are on the go during their first year of forestry training at Mont Alto.

Dr. Glennan to Talk On AEC Tomorrow

Dr. T. Keith Glennan, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission, will speak on "The Work of the Atomic Energy Commission" at 4:10 p.m. tomorrow in Schwab Auditorium.

The lecture is one of a series held for senior engineering students. There also will be several hundred seats available for interested students, faculty, and townspeople, Dr. Eric A. Walker, dean of the School of Engineering, announced.

Since 1947, Dr. Glennan has been president of Case Institute of Technology, Cleveland, O. During this term, he has also served in other positions. He was deputy chairman of the Committee on Ordinance, Research and Development Board, National Military Establishment from 1948 to 1950. He has been on leave from Case Institute since his appointment to the Atomic Energy Commission last year.

A graduate of Yale University, he received honorary doctor of science degrees from Oberlin and Clarkson Colleges. Dr. Glennan was affiliated with Electric Research Products, Inc., a subsidiary of Western Electric, from 1927 to 1935.

For the next seven years, his positions included operations manager with Paramount Pictures, Inc., studio manager with Paramount, and then with Samuel Goldwyn studios. After serving as director of the U.S. Underwater Sound Laboratory of Columbia University, Division of War Research, New London, Conn., from 1942 to 1945, Dr. Glennan served for two years as an executive with Ansco, Binghamton, N.Y.

Clothing Drive Set For Monday

Sacks to hold contributions for the Korean clothing drive which begins Monday will be distributed to all dormitory units and fraternity houses Saturday by Alpha Phi Omega, service honorary and co-sponsor of the drive, and Blue Key hat society.

Bags will also be placed at the College Sportswear store, opposite the post office on the corner of Beaver avenue and S. Allen street for the contributions of town students.

Posters above the sacks will explain their purpose.

Co-chairmen of the drive are Nancy McClain, Hat Society Council; William Slepik, APO, and Jean Lathlaen, Penn State Christian Association. These three organizations are co-sponsoring the drive.

The sacks are being given the committee by the New Windsor, Md., branch of the American Relief for Korea committee. Trucks from New Windsor will pick up the filled sacks at the end of the drive. Penn State students are being asked to fill 100 sacks.

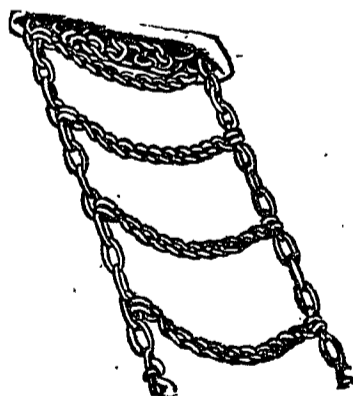

Letters have been sent to all sorority, fraternity and dormitory presidents asking each to appoint one person to be in charge of the drive in the living unit.

Only 15 percent of the relief promised Korea's 3,000,000 displaced persons by the United States for this year has been collected. The current clothing drives are trying to make up this deficit.

In a recent clothing drive in State College, the College Sportswear store collected 400 pounds of clothing by giving a $10 discount on suits purchased to each customer who would donate an old suit to the drive.

Church groups and the Democratic Women's Club also collected clothing for the drive, but no figures were available on their results.
