

Bitter Fight Looms Over Loyalty Bill

HARRISBURG, Dec. 10—(AP)—A bitter fight shaped up today over final passage of a long-disputed bill requiring loyalty oaths by public employes in Pennsylvania.

Forces favoring and opposing the bill planned mass meetings in Harrisburg tomorrow on the measure.

The bill, which would require anti-communist vows by all public workers in the state, including school teachers and elected officials, is in position in the House for a final vote this week. It has already been approved by the Senate.

Backed by Veis

A House Republican leader said meanwhile that the bill probably would be amended again before it is brought to a vote.

The bill is backed by state veterans organizations and has the support of Gov. John S. Fine. It is strongly opposed by various college organizations, civil rights groups and the state AFL and CIO.

A delegation of professors representing 15 Pennsylvania colleges and universities visited the governor today to urge him to veto the bill if it clears the House.

Details of Charges

Fine told the group however that he is in favor of the bill and intends to sign it if it reaches his desk.

One amendment scheduled to be inserted in the measure would require that appointing authorities inform persons charged with subversion of all details of the charges. The bill presently leaves to the discretion of the appointing authority whether it shall make known the charges fully.

Another amendment would broaden hearings into dismissal of persons charged with disloyalty by permitting examination and cross examination of the accused and the accuser.

Blood Drive Still Needs 45 Donors

Forty-five donors are still needed for the blood drive extension to be held tomorrow and Thursday at the Reformed Church, blood drive officials said yesterday.

A Red Cross unit from Johnstown will be at the church, across College avenue from Atherton Hall, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. on those days to secure 378 pints of blood.

The drive extension was established to handle the overflow of donors from last month's blood drive at the TUB. A second drive for 140 donors began last week when there were not enough student pledges to fill a two-day quota.

Members of the 112th Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, recently activated unit composed of students, ex-faculty members, and local citizens, have pledged 40 pints of blood to the drive. Officials said those over 21 who have not pledged but wish to donate may do so by merely walking into the unit sometime Thursday. Wednesday's schedule is full.

Drive leaders said pledges came in slowly and in small groups. Pledge forms may be secured at the Student Union desk in Old Main.

Trustee Group OK's Scholarship Fund

All-College Cabinet's proposal that a Penn State student scholarship fund to be supported and maintained by students and student organizations be established at the College, was approved Sunday at the meeting of the executive committee of the College board of trustees.

In other action, the executive committee referred a request for a change in Book Exchange operation to the special committee on the exchange for study, and tabled a recommendation by cabinet to increase student representation on the Athletic Advisory Board.

Although it was known that the trustees discussed the proposed Student Union building, no statement was made on the SU following the meeting. It was indicated, however, from a reliable source that a statement would be forthcoming sometime this week.

The student scholarship project was started by cabinet on Nov. 1 when it voted to contribute $1000 toward the establishment of the scholarship.

Provisions

Cabinet expressed the hope that the fund will be enlarged by contributions from cabinet itself, from students and student groups, by contributions to the College under provisions that will permit the money to be credited to the fund, and from repayment of funds by students who benefit from the fund. Repayments, however, would not be a requirement of those who receive the scholarship.

Scholarship provisions make it available to regular four-year students who have completed at least one semester of work with a 1.5 average. Preference will all-

Clothing Drive Set For Today

A drive to collect clothing for displaced persons in Korea begins on campus today and will continue until Saturday.

The drive, sponsored by Alpha Phi Omega, service honorary, Hat Society Council, and the Penn State Christian Association, was slated to begin yesterday. However, the sacks promised the drive committee by last Saturday, failed to arrive until yesterday.

The sacks are being given the committee for use in the drive by the New Windsor, Md., branch of the American relief for Korea committee.

Some of the bags were distributed to dormitory units and fraternity houses yesterday and the remainder will be placed today. Posters near the bags will indicate their purpose.

Boxes at College Sportswear, Inc., will receive contributions of town students.

Co-chairmen for the drive on campus are William Slep, APO, Nancy McClain, Hat Society Council, and Jean Lathlaen, PSCA.

The committee has asked that each dormitory unit and fraternity house name one person to be in charge of the drive there. These names will be sent to the PSCA office, 304 Old Main.

This clothing drive is one of a series of drives being conducted throughout the United States for Korean relief. National chairman of American relief for Korea is Douglas Fairbanks Jr.

Recordings of Richardson Dilworth's speech, "Individual Rights in a Free Society," given at the recent colloquy, "The Loyalty of Free Men" will be played at the Penn State Christian Association coffee-orum at 4 today in the Thompson Hall recreation room.

This is the first of a series of such discussion groups. In future weeks the other seven colloquy speakers will be heard and discussed one by one.

Debaters 'Excellent' At Pitt Meet

For the second consecutive year all four members of the men's debate team received "excellent" ratings at the University of Pittsburgh Cross-Examination Tournament this weekend. Mary Jane Kelley, on the women's affirmative team, also won a rating of "excellent."

Fourteen colleges and 20 teams from Ohio, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia were represented at the annual tournament, where each individual speaker is rated on his ability by his opponents. Those with a numerical score over 70 are rated "good"; over 80 "excellent", and over 90 "superior." No superior ratings were earned this year.

Robert Matasick, with a score of 85.5, was rated third out of 80 speakers. Eugene Kolber, who argued affirmative with Matasick, was rated 84.5. Sanford Hertz and Jay Heady, the negative team, both earned scores of 82.5.

Mary Jane Kelley, a newcomer to the women's squad, received a rating of 80.5. Her teammate Nancy Nelsen, also a novice, was rated 79.5, "good," and the affirmative team as a whole received an "excellent" rating.

The negative team of Peggy Fahringer, who argued at last year's tournament, and Barbara Menapace, was rated "good." Prof. Joseph F. O'Brien, of the Speech department, who accompanied the men's team, said, "This tournament is unusual in that the debaters evaluate one another. Skill in human relations as well as in argumentation is necessary to win a good rating."

The topic was this year's national intercollegiate question, Resolved: That the United States should adopt a permanent program of wage and price control.

Fraternities Will Not Show Uniform Displays

There will be no uniform arrangement for fraternity Christmas lawn displays this year.

According to Stan Wengert, Interfraternity Council president, a large majority of the fraternities objected to the lawn displays because no one would be in the houses to guard them against vandalism during the Christmas vacation. They also felt that the displays would not stand up under extreme weather conditions unless large amounts of money were spent on materials, he said.
