

Entrants Decided In IM Semi-Finals

By NORMA ZEHNER

Leonides, Simmons, Kappa Delta, and Kappa Alpha Theta took basketball games to move into the semi-finals which are played tonight.

The Leonides and McAllister tilt was one of the best played games this season. The lead passed from one team to the other several times throughout the game. McAllister tied the game 18-18 in the opening seconds of fourth period play. From then on, it was a keen fight to get the lead. Leonides came through to take a 25-22 win with Betty Gleim and Dottie Wayne contacting for points. High scorer for the victors was Ann Miller with 12 tallies. Jane Rice netted 11 points for the losers.

Despite a last period scoring attack, Kappa Kappa Gamma bowed to Simmons 29-25. The winners took the lead early and held it throughout the game. The Kappas came near overtaking Simmons halfway in the fourth period when Pete Caraway made a layup to put the score at 23-21. Simmons took over the scoring then with some nice long shots and cinched the game. For Simmons, Mimi Burritt had 12 points and Nancy Jarden had 11.

Fundamental--

is ready to give up some of her sovereignty in a union of this nature. His words were seconded by the West German Chancellor, Konrad Adenauer. And, the chancellor continued, there was no time to be wasted.

That expression of willingness to put aside sovereignty is the key that would open the door to a better world. The balance of power is based on a system of sovereign nations who, in normal times, have only their own interests at heart. A federated Europe would eliminate that selfishness on the part of nations. It would not create a weaker West but a strong united front against communism and a bargaining power that Russia could not ignore.

December's Jewels Bring Good Fortune

Just eleven shopping days 'till Christmas! If you can meet three requirements—if you have a girl, if her birthday's in December, and if you have lots of cold green cash—your problem is greatly simplified. The month of December offers a choice of three birthstones, turquoise, lapis lazuli, and zircon, all best known in dark blue hues.

Turquoise, the "Turkish gem," is said to bring success in affairs of the heart, and in amassing great wealth—a combination that leaves little to be desired. The Persian variety, of an azure shade, has been the talisman of horsemen for centuries. The American Indians accorded the green-blue variety a religious significance and thought it capable of producing rain.

Palace Decorations

The Indians combined turquoise with silver, both of which are found in silver mines today. Older Orientals, however, preferred gold as a setting for turquoise.

The zircon, known before the Christian era, is found in shades of yellow, brown, orange, blue, green, red, and white. Blue and white zircons are the best known. They are mined in the jungles of French Indo-China by hill tribes. The stone is said to bring honor, wisdom, a plentiful harvest, and safety in travel.

The ancient Egyptians and Babylonians considered lapis lazuli of a deep blue shade more valuable than gold. The stones were powdered and used for pigment for decorations on cathedral and palace walls.

Watch Your Step Today the finest lapis lazuli comes from Afghanistan, where it is mined for inlaid cigarette boxes, picture frames, and rings. The finest quality is of a deep, uniform blue, though sometimes considered more spectacular is the attractive variety flecked with pyrite or "fool's gold."

So, if you're looking for a Christmas present for a girl friend whose birthday falls in December, your problem is simplified. Provided you've got the cash, you might buy her all three stones. And remember—the turquoise is said to bring success in affairs of the heart, and white zircon often cannot be distinguished from the diamond. Beware!
