Coeds, Males Make Various '52 Resolution

As inevitable as taxes and death are the long lists of New Year's resolutions, which people, young and old alike, compile. Oftentimes they do succeed in writing out impressive lists of do's and don'ts, but sticking to them seems to be a different matter.

Hal Boyle, Associated Press columnist, wrote recently of a poll he had conducted among a small group of women to determine what resolutions, if any, they make at the beginning of a New Year.

Contradictory Polls

The results of Mr. Boyle's poll indicated, according to his interpretation, that women are too secretive to reveal what resolutions they really have made. Mr. Boyle claimed that women, always seeking to outlive men, must of course make more resolutions than the "stronger sex." He attributed the female's unwillingness to reveal the nature of her resolutions to the fact that admission would indicate that there is room for improvement.

Mr. Boyle's results were contradicted by the results of an informal Daily Collegian poll conducted among members of both sexes. The women queried were altogether as cooperative as the men.

One coed resolved not to burn cigarettes; another not to get pinned; and one voiced the universal collegiate resolution to study more next semester than she had during the present one. Another coed resolved to finish a pair of argyle socks which she had started a year and a half ago. One promised to be faithful to her diary.

Effort, Anyway

Women entered into a number of resolutions made by men. One fellow admitted it would be a pleasure to have women chasing him, 1952 being leap year, rather than having to chase them. Another male, up in the clouds after having become engaged over the holidays, resolved never to get engaged again. One resolved not to get married this semester—unless he could find a woman who was willing.

It seems that pinned couples make resolutions, too. One fellow talked his girl into resolving to give him a chance to explain why he was late, instead of blowing up first.

Resolutions, broken or kept, are really a wonderful thing. They give one that pleasant feeling of "at least I tried."
