Polio Fund Check Proves Chest Claim

Campus Chest officials yesterday produced a check for $382.33, paid last April 16 to the March of Dimes, to prove money from last year's Chest drive has been allocated to that organization.

The action came as a result of a statement last month by Prof. Evan Johnson, chairman of the State College drive committee, that his group did not accept any funds from last year's Chest drive. Johnson said at the time that it was against the policy of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis for the group to accept money from joint fund raising campaigns.

Must Be Returned

Coming on the heels of the check's release was Mrs. Balsler Weber's announcement that the money will be returned to the Campus Chest as soon as funds secured in this year's March of Dimes are available. Mrs. Weber is Centre County drive chairman.

Mrs. Weber said the county group accepted the check because it was anonymous in nature, but said the money must now be returned because the group cannot accept funds from joint fund raising campaigns. The Campus Chest combines several drives into one on campus.

Johnson said he did not know the money had been given to the county group until William Klisanin, Campus Chest chairman, showed him the check yesterday afternoon. Johnson said on Jan. 9 that the money was not accepted last year and added that money from this year's Chest drive could not be accepted because of the national ruling.

Sends Letter

Klisanin said he was aware of the national ruling, adding that the March of Dimes was included among Chest beneficiaries because the money was accepted last year.

Klisanin said a letter was sent to the organization this year, asking if it wished to be included in the drive, and no rejection was received.

The check, signed by Herbert Axford, last year's drive chairman, was endorsed by Mrs. Weber and John H. Truby, who is also associated with the group. It was Close went to China following graduation from George Washington University. He began newspaper work in the hectic days following the fall of the Manchurian dynasty and became adviser to the student revolutionaries in Peiping. At the same time he acted as aid to Gen. Wu Pei-fu.

Soon he became editor of the Peking Leader, a continuation of the oldest newspaper in the world, and co-manager of the Chinese News Service.

Committee To Report On Salaries

The members of College Employees Local 67 will meet tonight to hear a report from a committee which conferred with President Milton S. Eisenhower on the College's salary increase program.

The union, which claims to represent about 500 of the College's 1800 non-academic employees, has protested against the College's present policy of increasing salaries on the merit basis. The union has asked for a $50 a month across-the-board increase for all non-academic employees.

The committee met with President Eisenhower Saturday following an address by the President to the employees. Monday the President issued a statement summarizing the College's wage policy and program.

Although there were no indications what the committee would report to the union membership, it was not expected that they would have much more to say than what was included in the President's statement.

The meeting will be held at 8 p.m. in the Odd Fellows Hall in State College.

West Dorms Bring Fire Fund to $426

Contributions from the West Dorms have raised the total of the Gentzel fire fund to $426.66.

Marvin Krasnansky, head of the fire fund committee, yesterday announced the addition of $30 to the fund. He also repeated his request that the 14 students who listed losses report to Assistant Dean of Men Daniel DeMarino concerning their insurance coverage.

This amount brings to nearly $330 the cash donations. In addition to money, there are several merchandise contributions.

Campus Parking Solution Discussed by Wiegand

Stating that the ultimate goal is to give a campus parking space for all those who want to park there, Walter Wiegand, director of the physical plant, outlined the College parking problem and discussed possible solutions at the Dean of Men's student advisory board meeting last night in Old Main.

Wiegand told the student leaders of the various campus groups that at the present time it was impossible for all persons having cars to park on campus and that some restrictions are necessary until the College can reach the "ultimate."

The all-College committee made up of Chairman Wiegand, a member of Milton S. Eisenhower's advisory council, deans of various schools and student representative David Mutchler has reached no definite solutions to the problems but came up with a possible solution.

That possible solution, Wiegand said, a stop-gap measure until all the planned parking lot additions and enlargements can be completed, is that only commuting, disabled and on-campus car owners will be permitted to park on campus.

Constrict Circle

Commuters, Wiegand said, would be considered as those outside an imaginary circle which is to be drawn around and through sections of the borough of State College.

Wiegand declared that the plan was to continually constrict this circle as parking space was increased until the imaginary circle had been drawn up to the campus.

Major Sore

Restrictions have also been proposed for faculty and staff members, Wiegand said. Staff curtailment of parking would take the form of a quota issued to the heads of each school who would decide those who were permitted campus parking.

Wiegand listed one of the major sores in the parking problem as the jamming up of convenient areas such as the lots between Grange and Temporary building, the lot behind Osmond and the Engineering building lots.

Panhel Asks Co-Chairmen For Dance

Panhellenic Council last night unanimously refused to sign an agreement giving Interfraternity Council sole chairmanship of the IFC-Panhel ball.

The council, however, did not close the door to further negotiations. It recommended by a 16-3 vote that IFC president Stanley Wengert, who presented the proposal, suggest to the IFC executive committee that Panhel retain its present unpaid co-chairmanship.

The agreement also calls for three fourths of the profits to go to IFC and one fourth to Panhel in proportion to the amount of money contributed by fraternities and sororities.

IFC VP Chairman

If the profits of the dance are sufficient, the proposal states, the dance chairman shall be compensated along with the other committee members.

According to the new proposal, the IFC vice-president would be chairman of the dance and would be assisted by a member of Panhel and two other IFC representatives.

Wengert said he will take the Panhel recommendations to the IFC executive committee for reconsideration.

Claims Concessions

Previously Panhel had gone on record against the proposal at its recent workshop. Wengert went before the council in an attempt to clear up several points in the agreement.

Wengert told the Daily Collegian last night that the new agreement represented concessions by the IFC. He said that under the new agreement the Panhel member of the ball committee would be paid the same compensation given to IFC members of the group. Last year, he said, the Panhel representative was not paid.

He also said that under last year's agreement two IFC officers were paid from the profits of the dance. Under this agreement, he said, these officers would be paid from IFC's share of the profits.

Mil Ball Tax Lien Removed

The Department of Internal Revenue has ruled that the tax lien charged to the Pennsylvania State College Military Ball committee need not be paid. The lien had been levied Nov. 7 for alleged admission taxes at previous Military Balls.

The decision was passed after Lt. Walter D. Chadwick, Navy adviser to the committee named in the lien action, appealed to the Navy judge advocate's office in Washington.

A compensation payment, made by the committee to the Scranton office of the revenue bureau, from assets held by the committee has been returned and settlement has been made.

The lien, for $1585.43, including a penalty assessed at a later date, was called an unnecessary assessment by the Washington office.

Lt. Cmdr. Richard N. Billings called the assessment as case of "people in the field not knowing what the rules are." He termed the outcome "satisfactory."

Frosh to Attend Tonight's Game

All new freshman men and women are required to attend the basketball game between Penn State and Rutgers at 8 tonight in Recreation Hall, David Mutchler, Tribunal chairman, announced.

He added that all frosh are to wear their customs at the game. A special section in the end zone has been reserved for them, and Marvin Krasnansky, president of the Hat Societies Council, said that hatmen will take a roll call of frosh at the game.

After a slow start on Monday, women's customs became more noticeable as green bows dotted the campus. Men's customs begin at 8 a.m. today. The Book Exchange reported yesterday that 50 men and 43 women had purchased their customs so far.

Joan Yerger, chairman of the Freshman Customs and Regulations Board, said yesterday that all women over 21 are automatically exempted from customs. She said that women who have undergone customs at other schools may contact her for an appointment to appear before the board, which will decide if the cases warrant customs' immunity.

At a special Tribunal meeting last night, seven freshmen were granted exemptions from customs. Four were given immunity because they had attended other schools which had customs regulations.

Two were given exemptions because they were veterans and one because he was over 21.

A definite date for the end of men's customs has not yet been decided upon, but according to Miss Yerger, women's customs will end Feb. 24.

Women's customs remain unchanged from last semester. Men's customs are also unchanged except for the addition of special meetings with hatmen at which the frosh will be questioned on customs rules and led in cheers and songs. The first such meeting had been scheduled for tomorrow night, but has been postponed until Monday.
