

Faculty Directory Lists Famous Names

By DOT BENNETT

"A dull plot, but what a cast of characters." On this score the student directory has nothing on the faculty directory.

With such famous persons as Martin and Lewis, Olson and Johnson, Lloyd, Rogers, and Burns and Allen, it's easy to see why classes often turn into minor riots, and why some of the professors call themselves comedians.

However, even with our comedians and our Gibson Girls, students should still be able to get a well-rounded education. Included on the faculty and staff are Berlin and Mendelson, Whistler, French and English, Pyle and Joyce, Cook and Baker, Law, and Einstein.

Distant Towns

Students in ROTC should have no difficulty learning to drill with Vaughn, Montgomery, Ridgway, and Eisenhower.

For those interested in sports and recreation we have Professors Ball, Hunter, Fisher, and Driver.

There are also those whose names are reminiscent of far away places, such as Glasgow and Cologne, and those not so far away, such as Hazelton, Hallstead, Bethel, Cleveland, St. Clair, and Raleigh.

Some of the faculty seem to have confused their given and surnames; for example, Ruth, Rose, Roy, Stella, Roscoe, Raymond, Thomas, John, Jeffrey, James, Lewis, Harvey, Hazil, George, Glenn, Grace, Donald, Dale, and Henry.

Famous Teams

Still other well-known people on the College staff include statesmen Taft and Hoover, comic strip favorite Tracy, and, appropriate for February, Valentine.

There are also the combinations of Livingston and Stanley, and Sun, Moon, and Starr.

Still, with all the famous names, the most common name in the faculty directory, as in the student directory, and perhaps the most famous after all is, of course, Smith.

Bonn Mot--

You may, for instance, suggest to your golfing opponent that he, handsome dog, has inadvertently stolen the affections of the only woman you've ever loved. He may be 20 strokes better than you, but he would never in a million years be cad enough to defeat you after that. Or, if your opponent is "hot," and you desire to break his stride, it is not proper to spend a great deal of time searching for your own lost ball, but it is the height of both sportsmanship and Gamesmanship to spend all sort of time seeking his pellet when it disappears into the trees.

Lifemanship applies the principles of Gamesmanship to what Potter calls "the more restricted field" of everyday living. In the section on Week-Endmanship, Potter describes the gambit of the completely undesirable youth who appeared to women as the absolute in chivalry because he had trained himself to notice a woman reaching for a cigarette across three platforms of Waterloo Station, and to be on hand with a waiting lighter by the time the cylinder reached her lips.

Kappa Delta

Kappa Delta recently held Education Week for the pledges of the sorority. Dr. Agnes McElwee, associate professor of English composition, spoke on study habits, and alumna advisers gave talks on Kappa Delta history. The pledges entertained the sisters with a mock rushing party to end the week.

Following Education Week, Marilyn DuPont, Jeane Good, Corinne Janssens, Constance Marconi, Margot Mullin, Ann Patterson, Joann Terhune, Ann Twomey, and Bertha Ann Webb were initiated.

Delta Chi

Newly elected officers of Delta Chi are Frank Williamson, secretary; Joseph Messerman, treasurer; Robert Frame, corresponding secretary; William Bloemker, pledge master; Edward Barber, caterer; Paul Wilgus, house manager; and Edward Hill, rushing chairman.

Wally Krieger and Farbes Ryder will continue to serve as president and vice president, respectively.

Kappa Kappa Gamma

New officers of Kappa Kappa Gamma are Joyce Buchanan, president; Peggy Mayberry, vice president; Barbara Norton, pledge chairman; Marilyn Franklin, treasurer; Barbara Reynolds, membership chairman; Cassandra Caraway, scholarship chairman; and Jean Phillips, social chairman.

Chi Omega

The new officers of Chi Omega are Joan Lee, president; Joan Peck, vice president; Donna Estabrook, secretary; Mary Louise Elliott, treasurer; Betty Richardson, rushing chairman; and Roberta Carre, personnel chairman.

In this volume are sections on Newstatesmanship and Damned-good-journalist Play, How to Make People Feel Awkward about Religion ("Elsa, when the painted glass is scattered from the windows, and the roof is opened to the sky, and the ordinary simple flowers grow in the crevices of pew and transept—then and not till then will your church, as I believe, be fit for our worship."—after which, you may "win ten shillings on the golf course, come back very slightly buzzed from Sunday pre-lunch drinks, and suggest, by your direct and untroubled look, that by comparison with yourself, your host and hostess have been only playing at religion."), Wild-worthy's Counter to the Cunningham Indifference, Woomanship Basic and Secondary, and similar vital lessons in the Art of Living—without, of course, being an absolute blonk.

Rushees Get Invitations at Post Office

The Panhellenic post office, located in Woman's Building, is the agency for communication between sororities and rushees during formal sorority rushing.

Alumnae of sororities and Mary Brewer, assistant to the Dean of Women, work at the post office, which serves as the center for distributing invitations.

Rushing chairmen turn in coke date invitations at the post office, where they are placed in individual envelopes for each rushee.

At 5 p.m. Monday, rushees will pick up coke cards for coke dates on Tuesday and Wednesday. The cards must be returned by 8 a.m. Tuesday. Invitations for Thursday and Friday will be distributed at 10 a.m. Thursday.

No limit has been set on the number of sororities a rushee may visit during coke dates or on the number of hours she may spend in one suite.

No rushee may accept more than four At Home invitations which will be distributed at 10 p.m. Friday. At Homes will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday at the suites.

In order to equalize the number of rushees attending the parties on March 3 and 4, the post office will specify which of the two nights the rushees are to attend the parties of their choice.

The post office will do the same with Coffee Hour invitations which may be picked up 1:30 p.m. March 5. The post office must stamp all invitations for parties and coke dates.

Co-Edits

Sigma Delta Tau

Sigma Delta Tau recently initiated Nedra LeVine, Sylvia Goldstein, Rita Schleifer, and Phyllis Sukenik.

Alpha Gamma Delta

Alpha Gamma Delta recently initiated Elizabeth Dewees. A breakfast in the suite followed the ceremony.

Coeds Ready Party Clothes For Rushing

Prospective rushees have been rummaging through closets, pondering what to wear as formal sorority rushing starts tomorrow.

Date dresses or suits and stockings should be worn to Open Houses, which will be held tomorrow and Sunday in each of the 19 suites.

All sororities will hold Open House from 1:15 to 5:15 p.m., except Alpha Epsilon Phi, Phi Sigma Sigma, and Sigma Delta Tau, which will hold their affairs from 2 to 5 p.m.

School clothes are worn for coke dates, with skirts being preferred to slacks or jeans. Date dresses and stockings are worn to At Homes, and to most rushing parties. Some party invitations carry dress instructions on them, in accordance with the theme of the party.

Coffee Hours call for formal evening dress, while school clothes are worn to ribboning.

Panhellenic Council officers will explain further details concerning formal rushing at 11 a.m. tomorrow in 121 Sparks.

Weekly Radio Program

"Swiss and German Music" will be the theme of the next weekly radio program of the Romance Languages department at 9 p.m. Monday on station WMAJ.

Commentator will be Emory Swift, of the WMAJ staff.
